100,000 Fight to Attend Burial of Senator Long At Louisiana's Capitol

Minister Sounds Call for Unceasing Battle at Leader's Grave.

Police Quell Riots In Angry Throng

Many Are Prostrated in Hot Sun; Widow Sobs as Curious Stare.

By the United Press.

Baton Rouge, La., Sept. 12.—A square-jawed parson stood on the brink of a green grave today and told more than 100,000 persons that Huey P. Long is dead, but his political philosophy goes marching on.

Out across the hot, perspiring acres of white-suited men and women, the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, Long's first lieutenant in the share-the-wealth movement, sounded the call for unceasing battle to try to make every man a king.

Then ropes whined under the weight of the great bronze and mahogany coffin and Long's body slipped slowly into its garden grave near the soaring tower of Louisiana's State capitol.

In few other places in the United States could such an audience have been assembled as swarmed across the capitol grounds today. The blood of a dozen old-world countries course in the arteries of these people who gathered out of respect to a 42-year-old Scotch-Irishman who ruled them with all the authority of a highland clan chief.

Col. E. P. Roy, head of the State highway police, estimated the crowd at 220,000, but newspapermen accustomed to huge gatherings were certain it was not more than half that number.

There were olive-skinned Cajuns from the parish of Plaquemine, Creoles up from New Orleans Parish for the day, their clothing gay and bright even in this hour of grief; aristocratic looking Jews from the Gulf Coast, and Italians from the center of New Orleans.

They listened to Smith and realized that he was not only talking to them but to 125,000,000 others; talking to Huey Long's "poor and underprivileged" from coast to coast. It was the first outright attempt on the part of any Long ally to consolidate the Senator's national following.

Van Sweringen Coup Reported

Brothers Believed Ready to Buy Back 3 Billion Rail Empire.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 12.—The Van Sweringen brothers, of Cleveland, were reliably reported in Wall Street today to be prepared, with Cleveland financial banking, to regain control of their $3,000,000,000 railroad empire from a banking group headed by J. P. Morgan & Co.

Working control has in effect rested with the bankers for some time through collateral held against $48,000,000 of loans to the Cleveland brothers. J. P. Morgan & Co. plans to advertise the collateral for sale at auction tomorrow, and the Van Sweringens are prepared to bid in the collateral.

When it became known that the auction sale was to be advertised, it was announced on behalf of O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen that they and their associates had "completed arrangement to bid for the collateral at the sale." It was also announced that they had arranged "for added capital to carry on the enterprises."

Wall Street was inclined to surmise at first that the sale at auction might be only a formal matter to place the Morgan credits to the Cleveland brothers on a new basis, but from an important source close to the bankers it was learned that they were relying upon local Cleveland capital to see the deal through. These sources thought the possibility that any outside interests might outbid the Van Sweringens at the sale was extremely remote.

McCarthy Named Head Of Sergt. Jasper Post

Frank McCarthy is the new commander of the Sergt. asper Post of the American Legion. His election was announced yesterday following a meeting of the post in the Musicians Hall on Sixteenth street northwest. With more than 300 members of the post voting, McCarthy, an attorney in the Veterans' Administration, was chosen by a close margin over William T. Kershner.

Others elected for the 1935-36 term were Daniel M. Goodacre, first vice commander; Jesse R. Chaillet, jr., second vice commander; Edgar Bohen, third vice president, and Hugo Darling, jr., chaplain.

Cripple, Facing Separation By Illness, Slays Son, 4, Here

Boy Had Begged to Stay With Dad Before He Went to Hospital.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

Four-year-old David Ashcraft, jr., who loved his father so much that he begged to spend a night alone with him while his mother stayed with friends, paid for that devotion with his life. In the dim hours of yesterday morning the father held the small sleeping form over two gas burners turned on full in the Ashcraft's dingy basement apartment at 227 Third street northwest.

David knew that Wednesday night was to be his last with his father. But he had no way of knowing it was to be his last night on earth. Ashcraft, sr., 45 years old, badly crippled and tubercular, was to return to Gallinger Hospital yesterday. Instead, he was taken to the First Precinct Station and held on an open charge in connection with the murder of his little son. No date was set for the inquest.

The father, still slightly dazed from the gas fumes and the sight of his estranged wife's horror-stricken face when she discovered him with their dead child about 7 a. m. yesterday, told police he had tried to take his own life; that death for him and David was preferable to separation; that David was better off dead than under the care of his mother.

Scrawls Note.

After the little boy had stopped breathing Ashcraft, sr., withered and not much larger than his son, scrawled a note in which he explained his reasons for the murder and attempted suicide. The note, found by police, said:

"I am dooning this (the spelling is Ashcraft's) because my wife is not a fit woman to rase any of my children. She treated us so meen and God knows that I love my little boy and I can't bear it any longer. If there is a God I hope he will forgive me."

Below the signature Ashcraft mentioned a plot he believed his wife had concocted with another man to take little David away from him.

The distraught father told police he first intended to kill himself with the same gas that smothered his son. But the fumes only made him dizzy and ill. He tried to shoot himself with an old revolver, he said, but the gun jammed and didn't fire.

Others Asleep.

And so Ashcraft, who sold newspapers from his wheel chair for several years at Fourteenth and G streets northwest before entering Gallinger last February, sat through the long gray hours in the dreary basement room while the lifeless body of the little boy who had loved and trusted him lay on a cot beneath worn blankets.

Upstairs the operators of the rooming house, Mr. and Mrs. Estes Fleming, and their children slept peacefully through the tragedy. They smelled no gas, they heard no

Allison Whips Wood to Win Tennis Crown

Texan Requires Only 49 Minutes for 6-2, 6-2, 6-3 Triumph.

By the United Press.

Forest Hills, Long Island, Sept. 12. In the short space of 49 minutes, Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex., today atoned for all the bitter failures and disappointments that have been his in ten years of almost ceaseless campaigning on the tennis courts of the world.

In that short time—from 3:11 to 4 p. m. to be exact—Allison blasted past Sidney B. Wood, of New York, in straight sets, 6—2, 6—2, 6—3, to win the men's national singles championship of America, and write his name beside those of Maurice McLoughlin, Big Bill Tilden, Henri Cochet, Rene Lacoste, Ellsworth Vines, and other giants, on the big silver trophy. Allison stood on the lawn for the presentation ceremony, still in his playing clothes, but with his thinning hair neatly slicked, and he wore a grin that said, better than words, "It's been worth it."

Past Defeats Forgotten.

You knew, as they handed him the big silver jug, that he had forgotten the Allison who, after his Davis Cup licking this year, said sadly, "I guess I just wasn't meant to win." Also forgotten were the other Allisons who, in the past, had come so close to victory.

As gratified as the crowd was at the final success of the man who, left off the Davis Cup team a year ago, was rated no longer fit for international play, it couldn't help but feel sorry for Wood. For Sidney today had the double misfortune of being badly off his game and meeting a foe who was blazing. Only occasionally did the New Yorker find his true game, and while his

Little, Victor Again, Takes On Goodman

Golf Champion Routs McCullough, 5 and 3, Voigt, 4 and 3.

Meister, Kocsis Bow to Omahan; Lynch, Emery in Other Bracket.

By Dave Herman.
A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland Sept. 12.—A former National Open champion and the world's No. 1 simon-pure golfer will match brain and brawn tomorrow in the 36-hole feature semifinal match of the National Amateur championship.

Johnny Goodman the young insurance man from Omaha, who set the professional stars on their collective ears by winning the Open crown at North Shore in 1933, uncorked his golfing wizardry today, and won two matches to earn the right to square off with Lawson Little, jr., 25-year-old British and American champion.

Goodman, runner-up to Sandy Somerville in the 1932 Amateur classic at Five Farms, flared back into the amateur spotlight by eliminating Edlie Miester, home-town pride, 6 and 5, in the morning battle, and bouncing out Charlie (Chuck) Kocsis, Detroit ace, by a like count in the afternoon.

Shots Are Sensational.

Champion Little continued his sensational shotmaking, removing W. B. (Duff) McCullough, 27-year-old Philadelphian, 5 and 3, and George Voigt, 42-year-old New York stock broker, former Washington star, 4 and 3. The other semifinal match will bring together two up-and-coming golfers—Joe Lynch, stubby 24-year-old former Boston caddy, and captain of last year's Georgetown University team, and Walter Emery, 23, the tall pine from Oklahoma, 1933 Intercollegiate champion.

Lynch, wearing the gray and blue golf hat of Georgetown, believing it to be an omen of good luck, turned back Oliver Transu, Cleveland golfer, 4 and 3, and beat off a last nine challenge by 19-year-old Freddie Haas, of Louisiana, Western junior titleholder, to win 2 and 1, in the most thrilling match of the afternoon.

Tomorrow's tussle between Little and Goodwin will revive memories of their sensational match in the second round of the 1929 National Amateur at Pebble Beach. Bob Jones, the master of all he surveyed along the amateur horizon, had fallen before Goodman in a spectacular morning upset, and in the afternoon, Little, then an unknown golfer of 19, put the works to Mr. Goodman.

Rivals Are Close Friends.

Both Little and Goodman were members of the 1934 Walker Cup team which routed the British, and for years have been boon companions. But all is fair in war and golf and Lawson Little and Johnny Goodman will have it out in what promises to be the real battle of this, the thirty-ninth Amateur tournament.

There was no let-up in Champion Little's sub-par pace today. He was 2 down after six holes in his battle with McCullough, but, as had been in the case in three of his other four matches, he caught the Quaker City star before they rounded the bend.

It seems as though you can get this Little down somewhere along the outgoing side, but once he squares the match at the turn, you haven't a chance of winning. Rufus King, Bill Bain and Bobby Riegel found that out. Mr. McCullough also discovered it was true today.

Little shot the 15 holes against McCullough, a nice chap with a nice game, but not good enough to match the champion's in 1 under par, winning five of the last six holes, after being even at the tenth.

So, after McCullough was given his golfing lesson by the California howitzer, they threw that old-timer, George Voigt, against the young champion in the afternoon, and Voigt, great as were his efforts, ad-

Parley Fails To Iron Out Works Snarl

Diverging Views of Ickes and Hopkins Prove Stumbling Block.

Roosevelt Meets Again Today With Aids for Another Talk.

By the United Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 12.—A seven-hour conference between President Roosevelt and his chief recovery lieutenants had failed tonight to iron out difficulties besetting the $4,880,000,000 works relief program.

Determined to reach his objective—the employment of 3,000,000 men as soon as possible—Mr. Roosevelt, nevertheless, was forced to carry the conversations into tomorrow in an effort to meet a wide divergence of views on the part of Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes and WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins.

The conferees, representing the brains of the entire works relief program, sat around the table with the President in the high-ceilinged library of Hyde Park house. They wrestled with problems from morning until evening—problems that involved transfer of already allocated funds and the merits of works progress projects against heavy public works construction to bring a speedy stimulus to reemployment.

All Phases Discussed.

When the group took time out for dinner, Secretary Marvin H. McIntyre issued the following statement:

"The conferees went into practically every phase of all these questions. They discussed them from all angles, and no conclusions were reached. The Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Frank Walker, chairman of the Emergency Council, and Mr. Harry Hopkins are staying over for another conference tomorrow."

While all those who took part in the discussions refused comment, observers felt that Hopkins, in his effort to take thousands from the dole in the quickest possible time, had made an impression upon the President in his fight on Ickes' public works projects as too slow.

Hopkins feels that the way to put workers on jobs is through works progress projects that can be started without much delay and where the unit cost per man permits a wider latitude in the number that can be hired.

Must Be Spent in Year.

It was recalled that the President has not deviated from his position that all of the $4,880,000,000 must be spent in a year or else be returned to the Federal Treasury. He also is standing by earlier announcements that the employment peak must be reached by early winter.

In their canvass the group considered reallocation of some of the funds already given the Rural Electrification Administration and for housing under PWA.

The REA was awarded $100,000,000, but Mr. Roosevelt feels that such an amount cannot be expended within the time limits and should

Wife, Sons Quizzed In Contractor's Death

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Sept. 12.— J. Frank Fenn, 35 of Coconut Grove, secretary-treasurer of a contracting firm, died today of stab wounds and police detained his pretty young wife and three sons for questioning. The wife, Mrs. Cozette Fox Fenn, about 30, has been prominent in Coconut Grove circles. The eldest of Fenn's three sons is 14 years old.

J. B. Rowland, investigator for the State attorney's office, who questioned Mrs. Fenn, said she told him her husband came home in his automobile wounded. Rowland said an inspection showed no blood on the automobile nor any along the way from the machine to the house. There was blood, he said, on Fenn's bed and on the bedroom floor. A butcher knife found on the kitchen floor also was bloody, Rowland said.

Ingalls Is Speeding Eastward, Ahead of Miss Earhart's Time

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Sept. 12.—Little Laura Igalls, who can barrel roll and loop a plane as few women can, tried today for the third time this year to fly straight between Los Angeles and New York faster than Amelia Earhart ever did.

The dark-haired flier who holds the East-West mark and was the first woman to fly over the South American Andes, took off from Los Angeles at 5:44 a. m. Pacific standard time (8:44 Eastern standard time).

Four hours later she was reported sighted 712 miles along the 2,447-mile journey at Albuquerque, N. Mex., giving her an average speed of 178 miles an hour, compared with Miss Earhart's average of around 143 miles per hour in setting the present record of 17 hours 7 minutes 30 seconds.

Miss Ingalls has found the straightaway course much more difficult to negotiate than the ones she followed in barrel-rolling 714 times and looping 980 times in 1930. A duststorm ended her first 1935 West-East effort at Alamosa, Colo., April 17. A leaking oil line stopped the second one at Indianapolis May 26.

Flying a low-winged monoplane with top speed exceeding 225 miles an hour, Miss Ingalls plotted a course over Kansas City, Columbus and Pittsburgh.

She is the first woman ever to fly the same course nonstop from East to West, covering the distance July 12 in 18 hours 19½ minutes. She expressed the hope of lowering the present West-East mark to at least 14 or 15 hours and said there was a possibility of reducing it to 13 hours.

She did not carry radio-transmitting apparatus and therefore did not plan to communicate her position anywhere along the route.

The ship was loaded with 390 gallons of gasoline, weighing 4,102 pounds.

Says Torch Singer Took Own Life at Party in His Home.

By the Associated Press.

Downingtown, Pa., Sept. 12.—Young and wealthy Henry Huddleston Rogers 3d, son of the late Standard Oil baron, was held in jail tonight under suspicion of murder in the fatal shooting of "Blues" Singer Evelyn Hoey in a bedroom of his country home near here.

The blonde musical comedy star, whose voice enraptured audiences in New York, Paris and London, was found with a .45 calibre bullet wound in her head after a night of drinking and quarreling in Rogers' big stone house on Brandywine Creek.

Held with Rogers was William J. Kelly, a motion picture cameraman of Union City, N. J., the only other guest at the house. Both asserted the girl's death was a suicide.

They were held without bail pending a coroner's inquest next Thursday, although District Attorney William H. Parke, of Chester County, said the shooting "looks like a suicide."

Release Refused.

Chief of County Detectives Francis Grubb refused to permit release of Rogers and Kelly from the West Chester County jail after announcing discovery of "new evidence" which he said might lead to more serious charges. Earlier, the district attorney considered allowing bail of $1,000 for their freedom. The formal charge was "suspicion of murder."

At an autopsy it was found that the bullet which killed the 25-year-old torch singer had ranged from the right temple through to an outlet between the eyes, inflicting a disfiguring wound. Her thick blonde hair, waving over the forehead, made difficult immediate determination of the presence of powder burns.

The circumstances in which the 29-year-old Rogers scion was involved indicated an apparent marshalling of the power and wealth of the Rogers family. In New York it was announced James W. Gerard, American wartime Ambassador to Germany, "will represent the Rogers family in the Hoey case."

Mother Collapses.

The singer's mother, Mrs. H. J. Hoey, of St. Louis, who had been visiting her daughter in New York, was under a physician's care in her Manhattan apartment. She became hysterical and collapsed upon receiving word of her daughter's death. In St. Louis, Miss Hoey's father said he had characterized Rogers as a "temperamental" and "jealous" friend.

"There was no chance she took her life," Hoey said. "It would be just the reverse. She had nothing to make her unhappy."

Young Rogers, married since 1929 to the former Virginia Lincoln, of

Hitler, Angered, Calls Reichstag In Memel Fight

Summons Legislators to Hear Demand on Powers for Action.

By the Associated Press.

Nurnberg, Germany, Sept. 12.—Adolf Hitler, always the master of surprise tactics, created a new sensation today by calling the Reichstag into session here Sunday to hear a proclamation from him on the vexing Memel problem.

With the exception of the constitutional convention at Weimar in 1919 and the ceremonious opening of the first Hitlerite Reichstag in Potsdam in 1933, the solons always have met in Berlin. The body now has virtually no authority.

Foreign correspondents were told Hitler had learned certain facts about the treatment of Germans in the Memel territory which makes it necessary for him to raise his voice in warning before the world.

Tension of Long Standing.

Hitler is expected to appeal to signatories of the Memel guarantee, namely Britain, France, Italy and Japan, to see that justice is done. Nobody in informed circles, however, believed the proclamation would be such as to make armed intervention in the event of non-action by the guarantors of the Memel statute seem the only other way out.

(Tension arose last spring between Germany and Lithuania when four Nazis were sentenced to death for participation in an asserted plot to restore Memel to Germany. President Smetona, of Lithuania, commuted the sentences to life imprisonment.

(German before the World War, Memel now is a unit under Lithuanian sovereignty, but with clearly Hull Recalls Promises All Nations Made to Outlaw Force.

League Awaiting Action by France

Laval Presses for Amity as Other Members Back Council.

The Italo-Ethiopian Crisis.

In a statement held to constitute an informal invocation of the Kellogg-Briand treaty, Secretary Hull yesterday called the attention of Italy and Ethiopia to their peace pledges under the treaty.

The task of conciliating Mussolini rested solely with Premier Laval of France as Russia, The Netherlands, Sweden and Belgium aligned themselves with England to throw full League strength against Italy. Laval was expected to outline his country's position today.

By Felix Bruner.

The United States last night called the attention of Italy and Ethiopia to the Kellogg-Briand pact renouncing war, in a statement that was interpreted as informal invocation of the treaty.

Considering the international situation at the most critical point since the Italo-Ethiopian controversy, this country threw the weight of its opinion into the balance in what was termed officially a final effort to prevent hostilities.

Secretary Hull made public a statement in which he reviewed all the activities of the United States in connection with the controversy and which included an appeal for peace.

Peaceful Means Urged.

"The Government and people of the United States desire peace," he said. "We believe that international controversies can and should be settled by peaceful means.

"We have signed, along with 62 other nations, including Italy and Ethiopia, a treaty in which the signatories have condemned war as an instrument of national policy and have undertaken, each to all, to settle their disputes by none but pacific means.

"Under the conditions which prevail in the world today, a threat of hostilities anywhere cannot but be a threat to the interests—political, economic, legal and social—of all nations. Armed conflict in any part of the world cannot but have undesirable and adverse effects in every part of the world.

"All nations have the right to ask that any and all issues, between whatsoever nations, be resolved by pacific means. Every nation has the right to ask that no nations subject it and other nations to the hazards and uncertinties that must inevitably accrue to all from resort to arms by any two.

"With good will toward all nations, the American Government asks of those countries which appear to be contemplating armed hostilities that they weigh most solicitously the declaration and pledge given in the pact of Paris, which pledge was entered into by all the signatories for the purpose of safeguarding peace and sparing the world the incalculable losses and human suffering that inevitably attend and follow in the wake of wars."

Hull Praises Hoare's Speech.

The action of the United States followed closely the speech before the League of Nations Council in Geneva by Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign secretary, in which Hoare advocated throwing the full force of the League of Nations covenant against Italian militarism.

Secretary Hull yesterday joined spokesmen for other nations in approving the speech, characterizing it as a very able and timely appeal for peace. Hull's action in officially calling attention to the Kellogg pact, however, came as a surprise.

Newspapermen were called into his office on a few moments' notice with the explanation that an important statement was forthcoming. Standing behind a high-back chair with correspondents grouped about him, the Secretary of State quietly read the vital paragraphs of his statement. In answer to questions, he explained the appeal for peace, clarifying the statement, but refusing to be quoted. Much of the long statement was devoted to a review of the part taken by the United States in the Ethiopian controversy.

The Hull statement is expected to be immediately transmitted to the League Council meeting in Geneva. It is expected to be taken as throwing the full weight of American official opinion behind the effort to prevent war. The statement is considered to go about as far as the United States can go in view of the fact that it is not a member of the League of Nations.

Hull denied that he had communicated with representatives of any other nation before issuing his statement, but coming as it did following the Hoare League of Nations' speech, his peace appeal broadcast, and the appeal of other nations, it became a part of a general movement toward preventing war.

No secret was made of the fact that the United States considers the present situation most critical and that it believes the events of the next fews days or even hours will determine the question of war or peace. For this reason, the State Department rushed its statement to the press and the world, evidently timing it so that the League Council will have the full benefit of this country's views when it resumes its sessions today.

To Give France's Stand.

Two of the three greatest Western nations—England through Hoare and the United States through Hull—have now put their weight behind the move for peace. Premier Laval, in his talk before the League Council today, will express the attitude of France, which is expected to follow that of Britain and the United States. Thus Mussolini would be opposed by the greatest force of coordinated world opinion since the German Kaiser faced an armed world.

Reviewing the American part in the Italian-Ethiopian situation from the beginning, Hull declared that recent developments "appear to constitnte a grave threat to the peace of the world." He said this Government was "contributing in every practicable way toward a peaceful settlement of the present dispute."

The first move, Hull recalled, was the request of the Emperor of Ethiopia that the American Government examine means of securing observance of the pact of Paris (Kellogg Treaty). This request was made July 3.

In reply, the United States said this Government would "be loath to believe that either of them (Italy or Ethiopia) would resort to other than pacific means as a method of dealing with this controversy or would permit any situation to arise which would be inconsistent with the commitments of the pact."

Recalls Other Events.

On July 10, Hull recalled, he told the Italian ambassador that the United States was "particularly interested in those international arrangements designed to effect the solution of controversies by peaceful means."

The follotwing day, Hull said, he conferred with the British and French ambassadors calling attention to newspaper articles interpretating the stand of the United States as meaning that this country considered the Pact of Paris "dead."

"The Secretary," Hull asserted in his statement, "said he felt this interpretation was entirely contrary to the sense of his note to the emperor, which had emphasized the principles of the Pact of Paris and had given evidence of this Government's interest in the settlement of this dispute by ueaceable means."

Between You and Me

Reporters at Hyde Park Miss Coughlin Visit; Kentucky May Elect G. O. P. Governor.

By Raymond Clapper

IT'S a jolly life for a newspaper reporter assigned to President Roosevelt. All the rest of us, chained to the galleys here in Washington, read a little enviously of the gay picnic which the President and Mrs. Roosevelt gave the White House reporters at Hyde Park.

A phonograph played the old melodies, including, no doubt, "Happy Days Are Here Again." Hot dogs sizzled over the red coals, and the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, with their own hands, passed them around to the hungry reporters. The picnic was outdoors and very informal. After the eating there were old-fashioned games, with the President as director of festivities. There was apple ducking, they played "musical bumps" and had the most fun you ever saw, and the picnic closed with community singing.

Only for a few moments were troublesome duties allowed to obtrude themselves into the merry afternoon. Reporters felt, as a matter of respect to their home offices, where the expense accounts are checked over, that they ought to be allowed to have their mid-week press conference usually held on that day. It was too bad that the matter had to come up, but the boys had been through a harrowing 24 hours, were in bad with their home offices, and so it was decided to interrupt the picnic festivities for a few moments while Mr. Roosevelt held an al fresco press conference under the Hyde Park trees.

The matter that was troubling the reporters was this. The day before President Roosevelt had entertained Father Coughlin at luncheon and the reporters had been scooped. After luncheon, Father Coughlin had gone on to New York and it leaked out that he had taken luncheon with the President—not a bad story, so the editors in New York thought. They asked their Hyde Park reporters to confirm it. The White House reporters asked Secretary McIntyre about it and he denied it flatly. Father Coughlin must have been dreaming. And the editors in New York soon heard from their reporters who are on such intimate terms with President Roosevelt that there was nothing to the rumor that Father Coughlin had slipped in and had luncheon with the President.

But you know how editors are. They are a skeptical lot and they asked the reporters to dig around some more. The reporters worked that evening but got nothing except the denials. Overnight the editors had assured themselves that Father Coughlin must have been telling the truth about lunching with President Roosevelt and they again prodded their reporters who prodded Secretary McIntyre who in turn asked Mr. Roosevelt what he should tell them. Mac returned and admitted to the reporters that Father Coughlin had been at lunch with the President the day before and that Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of SEC had made the date and brought the radio priest to Hyde Park.

The reporters just had time to get off this revision of the official Hyde Park intelligence before going out to the Roosevelt estate for their picnic.

And when the games and singing were suspended for the press conference on the lawn, the reporters asked Mr. Roosevelt about the alleged Coughlin visit.

"Oh, Father Coughlin's visit," you can hear the President echo with a laugh. "It was a very nice social visit." And furthermore those were just newspaper stories about the row between Ickes and Hopkins. Nothing to it. And so everyone went back to picnicking and the reporters and their genial host made merry until dusk. Then hte newspaper correspondents went back to their headquarters at Poughkeepsie to write their pieces for the morning papers.

Political parade: Two Republican canditions for President are close personal and political pals—Senator Arthur Vandenberg, of Michiga, and Col. Frank Knox, of Chicago. They were young Michigan newspapermen together years ago, worked on the same paper. Last year Col. Knox made the speech that opened Senator Vandenberg's senatorial campaign. Vandenberg's re-election turned him into a first-rank presidential possibility. But the Democrats say they gained 20 per cent in sections where Knox spoke . . . Upton Sinclair's former campaign manager, State Chairman Culbert Olson, wants to be the Democratic candidate for Governor in California. National Chairman Farley saw him out there recently and likes his looks . . . Republicans have to walk a tightrope in attacking the new potato control law. Representative Brewster, Republican, of Maine, has noy joined the ranks of Republican Senators like Austin and Gibson, of Vermont, and Borah, and anti-New Deale Democrats like Byrd, of Virginia, and Bailey, of North Carolina, all of whom supported this drastic legislation. Chester Davis, head of AAA, didn't want it, and for good reason. It carried a recoil like an old-fashioned musket . . . Kentucky Democrats split so badly in their recent primary that Republicans hope to elect a Governor this fall. King Swope, the Republican candidate, came to Congress as the baby House member just after the war. His victory at a special election signalled the turn of the tide on the border which swept Harding in a year later. Republicans are preparing to help him repeat. Election of a Republican Governor in Kentucky this fall would cast a long shadow over Democratic hopes for 1936.

Huey Long is the first Senator to be assassinated while in office according to Senate library records. Charles Sumner, Senator from Massachusetts, was assaulted in the Senate chamber in 1856 by Republican Preston Brooks, of South Carolina, and although he lived for many years, was so severely injured that he never fully recovered. Senator David C. Broderick, of California, was killed in a duel near San Francisco, in 1859. Senator Edward D. Baker, of Oregon was killed in the Battle of Ball's Bluff, in 1861. Carmack, of Tennessee, after leaving the Senate, was assassinated as a result of a political feud. And Senator Frank L. Greene, of Vermont, while walking on Pennsylvania avenue, was hit by a wild bullet in a fight between police and a bootlegger in 1927. He died a few years later from injuries.

On the whole, however, sitting in the Senate still is safer than walking the streets the way automobiles drivers drive now.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief Of Pain

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are one of Nature's chief ways of taking the acids and waste out of the blood. If they don't pass 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter—your 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing.

If you have trouble with frequent bladder passages with scanty amount which often smart and burn, the 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes and dizziness.

Don't wait for serious trouble. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS—which have been used successfully for over 40 years by millions of people. They give happy relief and will help flush out the 15 miles of kidney tubes. Get DOAN'S PILLS. —Advt.

Oil Magnate's Son Is Jailed In Girl's Death

Evelyn Hoey Is Found Shot at Henry Rogers' Home; Suicide Claimed.

Cleveland, was virtually "cut off" as an heir to the Rogers millions when his father, the late Col. Henry Huddleston Rogers, of Standard Oil fame, died last July. He left young Rogers only the income from $500,000, which, compared to the size of the estate, was only a small legacy. The rest of the fortune went to his widow, his daughter, Mrs. Millicent Rogers Salm Ramos, and his grandson, Peter Salm.

The young woman's body was found lying on the floor of a bedroom, fully clothed, some time near midnight last night. At her feet lay a pearl-handled revolver. On a bed, nearby, was a blood-covered automatic pistol, and in the corner a sawed-off shotgun. The fatal bullet was found embedded in the wall of the bedroom, about 9 feet from the floor.

Chauffeur Gives News.

First word of the shooting came from Rogers' chauffeur, Frank Catalano, who reported it a "suicide." Catalano telephoned from a farmhouse about 4 miles from the house. Rogers had torn out his telephone during a quarrel an hour previously with Miss Hoey.

When Police Chief Chester F. Glisson reached the scene he found Rogers on the lawn, being "steadied" by two men, intoxicated to the point where he was unable to speak coherently, the chief said, and the living room strewn with cigarette stubs, glasses and bottles. A bowl of melting ice stood on the table.

The bedroom, Glisson said, "looked like any room after a drunken party." Rogers, he said, "couldn't talk intelligently."

Miss Hoey had been a guest at the Rogers place for nearly a week, and was the only woman in the house. Rogers and four other men were the only ones present. The others included Kelly, Catalano, who was in the garage at the time of the shooting; George Yamada, the cook, who was in the kitchen, and Claude Battin, a neighboring farmer, who had dropped in upon Rogers to discuss dogs.

As authorities pieced together the evening's events from the testimony of those present, they reconstructed a scene of bitter quarreling between Rogers and Miss Hoey over the beautiful young singer's attmpts to leave and return to her home in New York.

Tried to Borrow $5.

She tried to borrow $5 from the chauffeur, but was refused. When she put through a telephone call to her mother from a bedroom extension, Rogers ripped the telephone out and, according to Catalano, demanded: "Who the hell gave you authority to use my telephone?"

"About 20 minutes before the shooting," Catalano told police, "I saw Miss Hoey and she was crying. She appeared to me to be perfectly sober, however. I don't see how she could have shot herself," he said later. "Still, I can't express my opinion because I don't know."

Immediately after the shooting before police came, the chauffeur told police, Rogers became hysterical and had to be held by Kelly and him to prevent him from carrying out suicide threats.

"Rogers said: 'Bring me a gun because I want to end it up and be with her'" Catalano related.

"'I don't know why she did it. She had everything to live for,'" Rogers was quoted saying.

Neither Catalano nor Battin who talked freely, could explain the blood on the second pistol in the bedroom.

Battin said Rogers "had guns all over the place," while Catalano declared there was ammunition in the living room, dining room and bedroom.

"Handy With Guns."

Miss Hoey, Catalano added, was "handy" with guns, too, and often frequented shooting galleries in New York. The .45 revolver from which the fatal shot was fired, he said, was heavy enough "for two men."

Rogers' declaration that Miss Hoey's death was a suicide was supported by Battin, who was in the pantry entering upon the living room when the shot was fired. Rogers, Kelly and Miss Hoey, he said, had all been sitting on a sofa, Rogers and Miss Hoey quarreling. The actress said she was "going home," according to Battin, and she ran upstairs.

Battin, waiting for some lunch, saw Rogers and Kelly through the pantry window. "Suddenly—bango! —I heard a shot," he said. "Mrs. Rogers jumped off the sofa and ran out of the room. He came back later like a wild man, and Mr. Kelly went out with him. Then I followed them upstairs and learned the lady was shot.

"There is absolutely no question that Rogers and Kelly were on the sofa when the shot was fired. I could see them plainly."

Clings to Story.

Authorities subjected Battin to severe questioning on his statement, but District Attorney Parke said the farmer clung to his original story. "We have not been able to break down the story told by him," Parke said.

Yamada, the cook, in succinct phrases, said he was in the kitchen. "I hear no shot. I only work in this house one week," he told investigators. "I see right away it is no kind of a house. It is drink, drink, drink all the time. The lady is my boss. Last night I know nothing."

The graphic story told by Catalano, the chauffeur, however, authorities said, threw considerable light on events preceding the shooting.

Rogers and Miss Hoey, Catalano related, came to the farm last Thursday or Friday, and Rogers immediately was incensed over the run-down condition of the place and the killing of some valuable dogs.

"Miss Hoey kept telling him to take it easy and be quiet and rest, but he wouldn't hear of it," Catalano said. "He was in a continual state of excitement. This situation went on all week."

As the result of Rogers' irritability, the chauffeur said, Miss Hoey last night repeatedly admonished him to "go to bed and rest."

"Mr. Rogers was stubborn, however, and this started them quarreling all over again," he continued. "I was going around the house on my various duties, and about 8 o'clock, or maybe it was 8:30, I talked to Miss Hoey.

"She said she wanted to borrow $5 to get to New York with, and promised her mother would send me the money. I told her I did not want to go against Mr. Rogers' wishes, as he was my boss, and later he said to her: 'What the hell do you mean, trying to borrow money from my chauffeur?

"Then Miss Hoey went up to Mr. Rogers' bedroom, where there was an extension telephone, and tried to get in touch with her mother. She was either going to call New York direct, or else send a telegram.

Saw Girl Crying.

"Mr. Rogers heard her over the living room phone and said: 'Who in hell gave you authority to use my phone?' Later on, about 20 minutes before the shooting, I saw Miss Hoey and she was crying. She appeared to me to be perfectly sober, however, and she acted natural in every way.

"When the shooting happened, I was out in the driveway putting the station wagon away. Battin came running out and said: 'Come in, quick!' I went in. Mr. Rogers, Kelly, the cook and Battin were all in the kitchen. Somebody, I don't know who it was, said 'She shot herself.'

"I went up to Mr. Rogers' bedroom. Miss Hoey was dead on the floor. She was lying on her back near the door, her feet facing the door. Her eyes were open, her hands extended at her side, and her legs were crossed."

Reichstag Is Called In Memal Wrangle defined autonomous rights, under a League decision.)

Official Nazi quarters in announcing Memel was to be the subject of the proclamation said the Ethiopian situation would not be touched upon. To the question of whether the recent decision of Magistrate Brodsky, of New York, in acquitting Bremen rioters would be mentioned, the spokesman gave a noncommittal shrug of the shoulders.

Diplomats in Nurnberg for the convention thought it possible Hitler might take the occasion once more to justify Germany's course in withdrawing from the League, following the speech yesterday in support of the League by Sir Samuel Hoare, Britain's foreign secretary.

There were unconfirmed rumors tonight Hitler also would speak on domestic economic policy and even have the Reichstag sanction legislation concerning Jews which has been under consideration for some time.

After witnessing a pageant of 56,000 labor service men, the convention met again tonight to listen to speeches by leaders of the movement. Visitors were treated to a torchlight parade by 10,000 political organizers in honor of Hitler in Zeppelin Meadow.

Hitler took their salute in a grandstand before the central railway station.

In addressing 56,000 men from the labor camps, Hitler called a spade "a gun of peace and a weapon for domestic self-preservation."

"The spade is the instrument which most honors the nation," he continued. "I wish all Germany could witness today's spectacle, then even the last doubter would be converted to national socialism and realize that molding this great nation into one component whole is not a dream."

100,000 Pay Last Tribute To Sen. Long

The Rev. Smith Sounds Call for Unceasing Battle at Grave.

ing place of Huey Pierce Long," cried Smith, his vibrant voice powerless to carry to the edges of the crowd. "This marks only the burial ground for his body. His spirit shall never rest as long as lean human frames stand naked, as long as homeless wretches haunt this land of plenty.

"His affection for these sufferers was stronger than the flesh and is as everlasting as the soul. Hatred can not touch him now; malice can not reach him. He fell in the line of duty, he died for us. The ideals which he planted in our hearts have created a gnawing hunger for a new order. This hunger and pain, this parching thirst for better things can only be healed and satisfied by the completion of that victory toward which he led us.

"He knew not the definition of disloyalty. Progress was the sweetheart of his soul.

"He divorced the past, he weeded the present, he wooed the future. The Bible was his favorite text. Drama his natural art. When he passed all eyes were fastened on him watching tensely to see something that had never been done before, listening intently for something that had never been said before. And he never disappointed."

On and on Smith's periods rolled. He quoted from the Bible—a favorite oratorical device of Long's—and as he talked the words fell familiarly on a small group of men and a white, frail woman in black up close to the grave. She was Senator Hattie Caraway, of Arkansas—a woman who holds office only because Long stormed through her State campaigning for her re-election when she had abandoned hope.

Senator John H. Overton, of Louisiana, was there, and he, too, owed his high position to Long. There were hundreds here today who were in Long's debt for their jobs and livelihoods. But this man also had enemies—there is no neutral ground on Long in Louisiana—and they stayed away, sullen at the accusations that some of them had conspired to commit murder.

Challenge to Foes.

Out of the fifteenth chapter of the Gospel of St. John, Smith took a text that was a consolation to friends and a challege to foes.

"Greater love hath no man than this," he said, "that he lay down his life for his friends."

Then Smith swung to the peak of his oration with a plea to keep Long's political philosophy alive.

"The blood which dropped upon this soil shall seal our hearts forever," he said. "Take up the torch, complete the task, subdue selfish ambition, sacrifice for the sake of victory."

"I was with him when he died. I said 'amen' as he breathed his last. His final prayer was this: 'Oh, God, don't let me die. I have a few more things to do.' The work which he left undone we must complete. As one with no political ambitions, and who seeks no gratuities at the hands of the State, I challenge you, my comrades, to complete the task."

"Can it be that God consented to this fate in order that by this dramatic exit he might retire from the battle ground of political torture to find the quiet of eternity, while at the same time his torch was left to light our way?"

Perspiration coursed down Smith's face and dripped from his chin.

"Invictus."

The plain people of Louisiana, mud caked on their boots and their straw hats poked full of holes by time and wear, listened while Smith quoted a poem they probably never heard before.

It was Henley's "Invictus"—those rolling, thundering verses of man's confidence in his own destiny.

"Out of the night that covers me,
Black as a pit from pole to pole,
I thank whatever gods may be
For my unconquerable soul."

It was cruelly hot in Baton Rouge today. The sun baked the crowd that stood shoulder to shoulder in the sunken garden in front of the capitol. All day men and women fought for a place near the grave, shoving and tugging against the ropes that police and guardsmen used to hold them back.

Every 15 minutes or so an elderly man or woman would crumple quietly to the ground—prostrate from the heat.

Lieutenants Carry Coffin.

It was past mid-afternoon when the coffin was carried out of the rotunda of the capitol and down a flight of 48 stone steps.

The pallbearers were Gov. O. K. Allen, Lieut. Gov. James Noe, Speaker Allen Ellender, Seymour Weiss, Associate Justice John Fournet, of the State Supreme Court, and State Conservation Commissioner Robert S. Maestri. The weight of the coffin was too great for their strength, and State police took hold of the rails.

Off to the side of the procession a giant drum vibrated to a slow, melancholy march. Then the Louisiana State University Band, bright in their purple and gold uniforms, took up the dirge.

At the end of the crowd an elderly man sank to his knees, struck down by the sun.

"I don't care, I don't care," he muttered. "I'd just as soon die for Huey."

Somebody lifted the man to his feet. Four nurses patrolled the police lines, vigilant for anyone who fainted. A man walked on each side of Mrs. Long as she went blindly down the steps. She was swathed in black, and behind her came her 20-year-old daughter, Rose, clad in white. Beside Rose were her brothers, Russell and Palmer.

At the foot of the steps the coffin was placed on a wheeled carriage and taken 660 feet to the grave.

Riots were narrowly averted twice when the crowd broke through police lines. They were driven back, muttering their resentment. Close to the edge of the 40-foot lane that had been cleared through the throng, an excited man yelled, "Hooray for Huey; Huey's all right." Two State policemen took him into custody.

The man gave his name as William McRevy, 78, and said he had lived in Baton Rouge for 18 years.

"I've always been a Long man," he said, "and always will."

It was 20 minutes before the procession got down the steps. Behind the family came the Louisiana Legislature, four abreast.

Suddenly the big drum went quiet and the Louisiana University Band broke into a special arrangement of Long's favorite song, "Every Man a King." Threaded through the melody were bars from "Nearer, My God, to Thee" and "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Long wrote the chorus to "Every Man a King," which runs:

"There'll be peace without end,
"E'vry neighbor a friend,
"With ev'ry man a king."

Three airplanes zoomed down the sky, circled the grave and headed toward the horizon. Their motors drowned out the shouts of the hot, angry mob.

Break Through Lines.

Up and down the line swung highway policemen shouting:

Get back! Get back! We got to have more room!"

A 6-year-old girl in a yellow dress and bonnet fell to the ground and a policeman snatched her out from under the feet of the crushing crowd. The police lines wavered, then stiffened, and by that time the coffin was at the grave. A curious silence fell across the throng and the little girl sobbed in the arms of a policeman.

On the south side of the burial plot the crowd surged through the lines and fought up to within 20 yards of the grave. Police made persons in the first three rows sit down and that stopped the stampede.

Folding chairs were placed at the grave's edge for Mrs. Long, 82-year-old Huey P. Long, sr., and other members of the family. Tears were in Mrs. Long's eyes. Rose put her left arm around her mother's shoulder and with her right hand brushed tears from her own eyes.

Smith stepped to the head of the grave and began to speak through amplifiers. Even with that artificial aid, his words died in the sultry air before they had gone 25 yards. The speech lasted 14 minutes.

"Ashes to ashes and dust to dust," Smith intoned. Mrs. Long sobbed.

The sun still was boiling high in the sky as the brief ceremony ended. Mrs. Long and members of the family walked back to the front of the capitol. A long, blue limousine slid up to the curb and she got in, followed by her children.

Curious faces pressed at the panes of the automobile's window and stared at Mrs. Long. She looked away — at nothing. The motor whirred, motorcycle policemen sounded a warning and the car whirled around a corner and away.

The sun beat down on trampled grass and dirt-caked concrete. Scraps of paper lay lifeless and hot in the windless air. It looked like some great picnic party had encamped in the vast garden and now near dusk was straggling home.

Huey Long was in his grave.

2 Murder Trials Set at Salisbury

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Salisbury, Md., Sept. 12.—Two murder trials will feature the criminal docket of circuit court set for next Monday. John Carey and Arlie Lewis, accused of the slayings, were indicted by the September grand jury yesterday, which was excused until November 11, after reporting ten true bills.

Carey is charged with inflicting fatal knife wounds upon Carroll Marvel, a neighbor, on July 4. Marvel died eight days later at a hospital.

Lewis was arrested August 11 after the body of Howard E. Kelley, crane operator for a road-building contractor, was found in the pond at Powellsville. At the coroner's inquest three witnesses testified Lewis had told them he had slain Kelley and left his body in the pond. It was discovered by Kelley's wife and two neighbors.

The grand jury's reports also recommended erection of an extension to the county courthouse to provide adequate space for governmental offices and the erection of a new jail.

Berryville Unit Picks Delegate To Convention

Mrs. R. M. Ware to Attend King's Daughters and Sons Session.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Berryville, Va., Sept. 12.—Mrs. Ralph M. Ware was elected delegate and Mrs. M. F. Wisecarver alternate to the annual State convention of the Order of King's Daughters and Sons to represent the Golden Rule Circle of Berryville, at a meeting held yesterday.

The forty-first annual convention of the Virginia branch of the International Order of the King's Daughters and Sons will be held October 15 to 17, in the Washington Street M. E. Church at Petersburg, Va.

Mrs. Edward Hughes, branch president and council member of Ohio, will be a guest and Miss Jane Cary Randolph, daughter of Mr. Mrs. Benjamin Randolph, of the Mooring, Clarke County, who was awarded the scholarship to Chautauqua this summer by the Virginia branch, will be on the program.

The Speak Kindly, the Big Sister and the Busy Bee Circles of Petersburg will be hosts. This will be a very important meeting, as plans will be made for the golden jubilee, the biennial of the international order which will be held in Richmond, May 18-22.

Mrs. John B. Neill, county secretary, will represent Clarke County. There are four adult and two junior circles of this order in the county with a membership of over 200 whose combined efforts raise $2,000 annually, which is distributed to the poor in the county and augments funds for the welfare nurse.

Share of Farm Sold.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., Sept. 12.—S. Chilton Glascock and T. B. Glascock, have purchased from E. R. Glascock an interest in the 451-acre farm, known as Mount Hope, between New Baltimore and Broad Run, formerly owned by the late Henry V. Glascock. S. Chilton Glascock is employed as manager of the H. B. Phipps estate in Upper Fauquier. He formerly made his home in Warrenton, and was huntsman of the Warrenton Hunt several seasons.

Frederick Host To Chiropodists

100 Delegates From D. C. and 4 States Expected.

Parting Near, Cripple Slays Own Son Here

Father Was to Have Gone to Hospital After Spending Last Night With Boy.

sounds, Mrs. Fleming said Yesterday.

Over on Twelfth street David's mother also slept. She had no premonition about the fate which was to overtake her son. She had not wanted to leave him with his father for the night but the child had begged and pleaded, and Ashcraft had refused to let him leave, she said.

"But I didn't think he'd harm him. I didn't dream of such a thing," she repeated over and over yesterday afternoon as she sat in front of the basement apartment. Into that dark place she refused to go. It was there she had found David, stiff and cold, when she came at 7 o'clock yesterday morning to get him ready for nursery school.

"When I went into the house my husband looked up and said, 'You won't have to fix David up. He's dead.' I couldn't believe it," she said, her eyes swollen and red-rimmed from hours of weeping. "He was always so fond of David. He was really crazy about him, and David loved him so. I don't see how he could have done it, knowing how much David thought of him. I hope I never have to see that man again as long as I live. I don't want him at the funeral. I don't want him to have another thing to do with my baby."

Were On Relief.

Trouble had been brewing off and on in the Ashcraft household. The family was on relief. Ashcraft accused his wife of frittering away the money. Mrs. Ashcraft said her husband had threatened to kill her. Last Monday night she left home, taking Helen, her 14-year-old daughter by a former marriage, and David with her.

Helen went to visit a couple of girl friends. Mrs. Ashcraft and the 4-year-old boy went to stay with Mrs. Marie Todd, who lives at a rooming house operated by Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Corbin, at 1310 Twelfth street northwest.

Ashcraft remained alone in the basement apartment. Unable to get about except on crutches or in his wheel chair, he had a hard time looking after himself.

"He had nothing to eat so I took him down some food," said his landlady, Mrs. Fleming. "Mrs. Ashcraft kept wanting him to go back to the hospital but he kept putting it off."

But after he had been alone several days Ashcraft gave up and said he would return to Gallinger if only he could first spend an evening with David.

Feared Husband.

Mrs. Ashcraft, according to her story and that of Mrs. Fleming, brought David to the street corner near the Fleming's rooming house Wednesday night but refused to enter the basement apartment. She was, she explained yesterday, "afraid of what that man might do to me. I never once thought he'd hurt David but I was afraid of what he'd do to me."

Helen, who had accompanied her mother to the street corner, was delegated to escort David to his father. Once Ashcraft had got hold of the boy he refused to let him leave.

"I didn't know what to do," said Mrs. Fleming. "But David begged so to stay with his father that I said maybe Mrs. Ashcraft had better let him."

Mrs. Ashcraft's consent was finally won. David and his father settled down to their last evening together.

Mrs. Fleming's 6-year-old daughter Daphne joined the man and the boy in a game of 500. After her mother took Daphne off to bed about 8:30 David and his father went out. Mrs. Fleming heard them returning to the house about 11. She looked out and saw Ashcraft carrying a large package which she now believes was a bottle of wine. David had an ice cream cup.

She heard the child say:

"Daddy, don't you want me to carry that for you?"

Then the dark basement swallowed the forms of the man on crutches and the happy little boy with his ice cream cup.

Two From D. C. Added To Storm Death List

Two additional veterans, whose last-known addresses were Washington, were included in a further list of victims who met death in last week's hurricane on the Florida keys.

The Washingtonians, according to the Veterans' Administration, were Michael Marik and Edward D. Costello.

Denver & Salt Lake Plans Refunding

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—The Denver & Salt Lake Railway Co. has under consideration a plan to refund the company's first mortgage 6 per cent bonds, due 1950, financial circles reported today. No official action has been taken yet.

Jesse H. Jones, Reconstruction Finance Corporation chief, said yesterday that the RFC "would not mind taking a part" in any refunding of the road.

Conferees Fail To Straighten Works Tangle

go where it can provide jobs in a hurry. The same applies to housing.

Whether any additional funds will be forthcoming in the near future for the Resettlement Administration was another problem studied. Rexford G. Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture, who is directing the resettlement program, was on hand for the discussions.

It was indicated that the President wants to settle all the pending problems now so that he can start his Western trip feeling that the program's future is secure.

Ickes sat next to Hopkins at luncheon in the Roosevelt home. One of the guests, asked for details, remarked:

"They both enjoyed the mushrooms."

The conferees referred all questioners to McIntyre, who issued his statement when he stepped from a White House automobile that brought him, Ickes, Walker, Col. Horatoio Hackett, PWA housing expert, and Charles West, Undersecretary of the Interior and presidential liaison man, from Hyde Park.

Curley Seeks Federal Grant.

Others who attended the conference included Fred Ironsides, assistant to Walker; Corrington Gill, aid to Hopkins, and Daniel W. Bell, Acting Director of the Budget.

When the works discussion ended Mr. Roosevelt met with Gov. James M. Curley of Massachusetts who sought a Federal grant of $4,000,000 for development of Boston harbor. He explained the city was ready to add $1,000,000 to that sum and urged reconsideration of the project, which has been vetoed by Hoqkins, but approved by Ickes.

Curley left Hyde Park confident that affirmative action would be taken on his appeal.

After dinner, Mr. Roosevelt met again with Hoqkins, Ickes and Walker for further exploration of the works situation.

Rally to Hear Fitzgerald.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., Sept. 12.—Prominent Republican and Democratic speakers, including Norbert J. Fitzgerald, of the Workman's Compensation Board, will speak at a mass meeting here Friday in the Strand Theater on the Pennsylvania constitutional revision. The meeting is sponsored by the local Democratic club.

School Fund Increase.

Danville, Va., Sept. 12.—The city council has agreed to take $8,000 from the city treasury to be added to the PWA bond issue and grant through which the school program is being carried out.

9-Pound Blue Reported Caught in Chesapeake

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 12.—Harry H. Sager, attorney, could produce three witnesses today who would testify that he pulled from the waters of Chesapeake Bay Tuesday one of the largest bluefish known to have been caught this season. The bouncing denizen of the deep, tipping the scales at 9 pounds and 13 ounces put up a stiff battle before he was dragged into Capt. Eddie Gooch's boat.

Mr. Sager's companions on the angling venture were Al Kreger, Charles Beck and F. A. Soret. They motored to Sunnybank and voyaged into the bay from there.

from Cab to Caboose they Satisfy

The man who holds the throttle — the flagman who "gives 'em the red rag"— people all over the country enjoy Chesterfields.

One reason is Chesterfields are milder—mildness that smokers like.

Another reason is they taste better—a pleasing taste and flavor that smokers like.

From cab to caboose . . from Main Street to Broadway . . they get an O. K.

Back To America.

Wednesday afternoon, on the famous tennis courts at Forest Hills, the amateur singles' championship was assured of its return to this country. Yesterday, on the same field, the title passed definitely to Wilmer Allison, whose convincing superiority Sidney Wood was unable effectively to question.

Felicitations, however, should not end with those which Allison so richly deserves. Praise is also due Frederick Perry, although his defeat by Allison, 24 hours earlier, went far toward deciding yesterday's issue. The Britisher, whose skill and brains had held him the American title for two years, played bravely through the last couple of his three sets, after receiving an injury that kept him in constant pain and that should, from a medical point of view, have forced his immediate retirement. What is more he sportingly refused to regard his fall as in any way an alibi for his defeat.

This is not to say that Allison won because of Perry's accident: Allison has consistently been nearer to beating Perry than any other of the Englishman's rivals. Nevertheless, Perry's defeat provided a triumph for Perry's pluck, permitting the happy outcome that, while America wins the championship, Britain shares the glory.

Why Such Haste?

The long-standing conflict between Secretary Ickes of the PWA and Administrator Hopkins of the WPA has been greatly aggravated by the strange insistence upon transferring 3,500,000 persons from relief rolls to work relief jobs by the first of November. That ill-advised decision is primarily responsible for the attempts of rival spending agencies to grab the largest possible proportion of the $4,000,000,000 which the President proposes to spend within the present fiscal year.

Haste in transferring the unemployed from relief rolls accounts for the wholesale rejections of public-works projects by Mr. Hopkins, and haste is also responsible for the chaos that reigns in the local work-relief agencies established by the WPA. This same feverish eagerness to abolish direct relief without delay has resulted in orders for the "liquidation" of existing relief organizations, such as the District Transient Bureau, with amazing disregard for the adequacy of substitute agencies.

If the unemployed were starving, and the country daily sinking deeper into the mire of depression, hasty action on work relief would be understandable. But there is no present emergency that can excuse a mad rush to shift 3,500,000 men from direct relief to work-relief rolls by some arbitrarily fixed date. Congress has given the President extraordinary discretionary power to determine the purposes for which work-relief funds shall be spent. Before passage of the relief bill the Administration laid great stress upon the necessity of a flexible system, adaptable to unforeseen needs and changing conditions. Now that the President is in a position to make decisions virtually unhampered by statutory requirements, he seems positively eager to forfeit his freedom of choice by definitively allocating all the work-relief funds at his disposal.

With business conditions showing unmistakable signs of improvement the President should be considering the possibility of withholding part of the work-relief fund in the hope that the numbers of unemployed will decline as recovery progresses. Even if the idle are not rapidly absorbed by private industry, there will be less need for Federal aid as business improves. States and municipalities will be able to contribute more for relief purposes and private aid will be more freely given to dependents. The President may be correct in assuming that a large proportion of the unemployed have become a permanent public charge, although many would challenge this opinion. However, chronic unemployment—whatever its scope—will not be eliminated by resort to exasperating boondoggling activities.

It would be more economical and less demoralizing to retain the unemployed on direct relief until they can be provided with suitable and useful employment. Time and intelligent planning are required to obtain maximum benefits with minimum waste from the outlay of $4,000,000,000. The task that confronts the President is not merely that of apportioning Federal funds among various rival claimants for relief spoils. He should be prepared to modify his stated objectives in order to preserve the flexibility of the relief system and to avoid extravagant dissipation of public funds.

Arms For Ethiopia.

The initial reactions to Sir Samuel Hoare's historic speech to the League Assembly have been strongly favorable to the preservation of world peace.

Several of the smaller European nations, which can not like Great Britain be accused of having any immediate and selfish interest in the threatened African war, have promptly indorsed the policy of "steady collective resistance to all acts of unprovoked aggression" enunciated for Great Britain by its foreign secretary on Wednesday. Eamon de Valera, President of the Irish Free State, who does not automatically follow a British lead, has thought it desirable to support London by saying at Geneva that destruction of the League of Nations "would be a crime against humanity." And the developing line-up against Italy is rendered more impressive by yesterday's decision of the League Council to remain permanently in session during the further development of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute.

Two other significant occurrences in states not members of the League are an essential part of the picture. In addition to the Administration's timely statement last night, taking direct issue with Italy's claim to freedom of action, Secretary Hull yesterday intimated that the United States will do nothing to oppose any collective pressure which League members may decide to exert upon Italy. Public opinion in this country will unquestionably support the position that no obstacle will here be raised to the exercise of an international police power. The State Department's strong reminder to Mussolini of the existence and importance of the Kellogg pact is evidence of this.

Far less important but none the less worthy of attention was Hitler's proclamation at Nuremberg, stressing Germany's present ability to defend herself, but stating that "we Nazis intend to live in peace and quiet with our neighbors." It is to Germany that Mussolini will naturally turn for support in the event of concerted pressure upon Italy, and present emphasis by Hitler on a "good neighbor" policy is calculated to encourage France to line up strongly with Great Britain in behalf of the League Covenant.

But while the situation is crystallizing in a way which doubtless causes Mussolini much inward perturbation, it must not be forgotten that he has the inside track. Unanimity, excepting the disputants, is necessary to make any League vote on the exercise of sanctions effective.

In order to safeguard the sovereignty of its members an exceedingly cumbersome procedure must be followed by the League in applying pressure to an aggressor state. Moreover there must first of all be a clear definition of aggression, and so far of course Italy has done nothing but send troops and war supplies to her own colonies. No concerted League action can even be attempted until an apparent intent to violate the Covenant has become outright violation. And even then, as Japan showed four years ago, there are many ways in which an aggressor can legally block definition as such, while swiftly creating a fait accompli through military action

The mass pressure now beginning to concentrate on Rome is therefore of moral rather than physical significance. But even so its importance is not to be minimized. In advance of its projected invasion the Italian government knows, and in spite of censorship the Italian people are doubtless beginning to realize, that the rape of Ethiopia is arousing the organized opposition of the world community. The morale of the Italian troops in East Africa will not be strengthened by growing realization that their contemplated operations are viewed with widespread disgust and repudiation.

The same knowledge will greatly strengthen those barefooted warriors who are now mobilizing to defend their homes from the scientific extermination of a ruthless invader. The slow development of a system of international order has accidentally made the primitive legions of Ethiopia crusaders in behalf of civilization. Italian generals, who have good reason to know the importance of morale, are probably far from happy over the intangible reinforcement which Ethiopia is now receiving. Whatever the future holds, the first League sanction—mobilization of public opinion—has already been effectively applied to Italy.

Unique Opportunity.

Regardless of how carefully it may have been analyzed and drafted, the success of any new and experimental law will largely depend upon its administration. Every student of government knows that even the most perfect statutes break down when left to the mercy of incompetent executives. It is for this reason that the organization and initial acts of the Social Security Board are being watched with such intense interest.

By choosing former Gov. Winant as chairman of the board and Arthur Altmeyer as one of its members the President gave this administrative agency an excellent start. Mr. Winant has confirmed this impression by the systematic manner in which he has begun the work of organization. Aside from the fact that the board was denied operating funds, when Huey Long filibustered Congress to an ignominious adjournment, the national social security program has been inaugurated under most favorable auspices.

In some respects, however, that auspicious beginning emphasizes difficulties yet to be overcome. One of the foremost will be the organization of a competent staff entirely aloof from the spoils system. Pressure for the appointment of politicians under the present Administration has been terrific. The social security act calls for selection of a central administrative agency through competitive examinations, excepting attorneys and "experts." Spoilsmen will certainly attempt to use this latter term as a loophole through which to penetrate the security set-up. Moreover, the act clearly permits the State old-age and child-welfare agencies to be chosen without benefit of the merit system. This is likely to be a source of constant difficulty.

Still more important, the board will be charged with the responsibility of establishing this gigantic new system on a sound actuarial basis. Public opinion of unemployment and old-age insurance will be formed by the operation of the law during its first few years. It is not an exaggeration to say, therefore, that the future of social legislation in the United States may be determined by the manner in which this board directs the present experiment.

No one of the board's problems, however, appears insurmountable. If it is permitted to operate free from politics, if it is not asked to perform the impossible, the board may be expected to give a good account of itself. Its opportunity for service of a most vital character to the American people is almost without limit.

Non-Resident Pupils.

Accommodation of non-resident pupils in District schools is properly regarded by the Board of Education as a major problem. Approximately 3,000 children from outside the District attended local schools last year. With the city rapidly expanding into adjacent counties, the number is likely to increase every season. Washington's schools are already overcrowded. In the absence of a large building program, more drastic restrictions against outside pupils appear inevitable.

No one who is familiar with conditions in the 38 most crowded local schools can doubt the necessity of barring new non-residents from these institutions. Yet these regulations may work hardships on many pupils expecting to pursue their studies in Washington this winter. From a national viewpoint it is a pity that any student from anywhere should be barred from the schools of the Capital City. As the system is now operated, however, attendance of non-residents must be controlled to prevent injustice to local pupils and taxpayers.

Likewise, the fairness of the new tuition fees seems to be above question. In each case these fees represent only the average cost per pupil of maintaining the various institutions. Moreover, such fees are paid by only a very small percentage of the non-resident pupils attending our schools. Most of these pupils are exempted on the ground that one of their parents works in the District or is elsewhere employed by the Government.

Certainly this is not an arbitrary arrangement. On the contrary, it is generous, as many residents of new communities just across the District line will testify. Nevertheless, it is far from being satisfactory because it leaves the educational facilities of suburban areas in a very uncertain status. On several occasions Congress has threatened to bar all non-residents from Washington schools. If such a step should be taken, hundreds of children might be denied education of any sort until Maryland and Virginia authorities could provide additional housing and equipment.

The situation obviously calls for the adoption of a permanent policy with regard to non-resident pupils. To make such a policy effective it should be worked out in cooperation with school authorities of nearby counties. The problem of coordinating the water and sewage systems of suburban communities with those of the District was solved through the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission. A similar tie-up of the educational system serving the metropolitan area may not be advisable. But the necessity of cooperative action on a problem common to both areas should not be further neglected.

Fortunately Montgomery County has pushed its educational standards to a high level. It should not be difficult to work out with this and other adjacent counties arrangements that would guarantee adequate school facilities in the suburbs while effecting an equitable distribution of the cost.

Pitcairn Gained.

It has been a long time since we have heard from Mrs. Boole, but she broke into the news again yesterday, at Atlantic City. The world president of the W. C. T. U. arose at the annual convention of that organization to make her report, telling, amid cheers, that her far-flung society now embraces Pitcairn Island, in the Pacific Ocean.

There seems something a little pathetic in this boasting. After 61 years of organizational activity, which included the lush days of prohibition, isn't it rather a comedown to have to fall back on the lonely Pitcairn islanders for support?

But perhaps it is just as well that the good ladies have this sanctuary, once the home of mutineers and once the scene of bloody travail, under their gentle wing. When, as they once predicted, conditions again get so intolerable that they must flee from the degradation of the United States, the Mrs. Peabodys of that day will have a safe sanctuary.

In moments of relaxation we still brood with perplexity on the flight of that determined woman from puritanical Massachusetts to the Everglades of Florida, taken because the former State held her beloved eighteenth amendment in too great a scorn.

Prosperity is a luxury, and, like any other luxury, we can ill afford it if we have to buy it on credit.

A Central Transfer Agency.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of September 3, directs attention to the executive order of August 30, creating a transfer agency for non-civil service workers, under the supervision of the Works Progress Administration. This action is the result of the intensive work of the interlodge committee on government personnel transfer formed about six months ago and composed of delegates from fourteen lodges of civil service agencies and six lodges of non-civil service agencies of the American Federation of Government Employes, whose program is to have established:

1. A transfer agency whose functions shall be to serve both the Government and the employe by accomplishing the reassignment to other Government departments of employes who would otherwise be released through no fault of their own, and
2. The extension of classified civil service status to all agencies now existing or in the future created, incumbents to maintain their jobs by passing a non-competitive examination.

The present situation, referred to in your editorial, whereby the emergency agencies, outside of the civil service, are the expanding units, constitutes a definite threat to the merit system unless a program such as is outlined by the interlodge committee is made effective. It is hoped that a central transfer agency for civil service employes will be established also, the need of such an agency having been felt for many years. Many thousands of dollars would be saved the taxpayers annually by continuity of employment, as the waste of training new employes would in many instances be eliminated.

GERTRUDE M. EVANS,
Corresponding Secretary, Interlodge Committee on Government Personnel Transfer.
Washington, Sept. 7.

The Franciscan Order.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the issue of The Post of September 8 there are some erroneous statements to which I would like to call your attention. The first European settlement in California was not founded by the Jesuits but by the Franciscans; Father Junipero Serra was a Franciscan (in the Hall of Fame at the Capitol he can be seen in his Franciscan robes). All the old missions of California, 21 in number, were Franciscan missions.

The Franciscan Order, founded by St. Francis, of Assisi, in 1219, was the first to establish missions outside Europe after the latter had been christianized; and for the past 700 years it has stood in the forefront of the church's missionary army, though many people are under the impression that the Jesuits are the outstanding missionary group in the church.

Right here in Washington the Franciscans have a number of establishments at and near the Catholic University:

1. The Franciscan Monastery with its replicas of shrines of the Holy Land;
2. Capuchin College of St. Francis;
3. St. Bonaventuri's College (Conventual Franciscans);
4. Atonement Seminary of the Holy Ghost (Graymoor Friars, belonging to the Third Order Regular of St. Francis—the same who conduct the Ave Maria Hour on the air);
5. Holy Name College (Franciscans of the Province of New York);
6. Sacred Heart Friary (Franciscans of the Chicago Province).

Let me add that I consider the page on which the article in question appeared a very excellent one.

Stepfather To Violence.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In view of the space given to the rude words of a city magistrate in a recent case in New York involving our relations with a friendly foreign power, public attention should be directed to the judicial language of a real judge spoken in the United States District Court of New York in 1919.

"If Chile considers it a governmental function to go into the carrying trade, that is the business of Chile, and if we do not approve of it, if we do not like it, if we do not wish any longer to accord that respect to the property so engaged, that has hitherto been accorded to government property, then we must say so through diplomatic channels and not through the judiciary. Otherwise the judiciary are really contributing to what might become under conceivable circumstances a casus belli." (Judge Hough, Maipo, 259, Federal Reporter, 368.)

Prejudice in a magistrate is stepfather to violence.

Merely Identification.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with deep sense of sorrow of the assault of an Armenian man upon a boy the other day. I hope and am sure that he will get his due punishment at the hand of justice. But I was surprised on that occasion to notice that your paper, and other papers, too, have given the name of the race of the culprit.

In other cases of crime committed by citizens the press is satisfied by simply giving the name of the criminal and omitting his race connections, whether they are Italian or Polish, or what not. Why is this discrimination in the case of an Armenian citizen?

Random Views on Huey Long's Death

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congratulations to Westbrook Pegler for his splendid column!

The writer was taught never to speak disrespectfully of the dead, but she was also taught never to be afraid to speak out and express herself when dealing with facts. And now, thank God, this writer comes out plainly, boldly, with the truth! He informs the world of the selfish motive behind the actions of the late Senator Huey Long. Of all the plain, almost cruel, injustice in his dealings with his fellow men!

Oh, how often we have heard: That man Huey Long ought to be muzzled. He was one who stirred up agitation and trouble continuously. Thank you, Westbrook Pegler, for the truth!

MRS. R. F. TRUESDALE.
Washington, Sept. 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Within the past several weeks the Nation has witnessed the tragic deaths of two outstanding Americans—Will Rogers and Huey P. Long.

They were, of course, exponents of different philosophies of life. It may be that Senator Long's motives were equally misunderstood by his ardent proponents as well as by his enthusiastic opponents.

Nevertheless, could the American people be assured of the perpetual extinction of that social scourge—the mendacious, conniving, insincere, professional politician—Huey P. Long will not have died in vain.

HOPEFUL.
Washington, Sept. 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am going to beg of you to publish the following letter about Huey P. Long. I am from the City of New Orleans. I am very sad and this is from the heart.

Leadership, all leadership, is confident understanding. We all like to follow the one who knows, who has a definite understanding with himself and with the ideas which drive him on.

Character is at the base of all friendship, all high endeavor and all sound leadership. Such leadership is inspiring to us all. To it, forever, should we pay tribute and appreciation. It is a wonderful rule of life to keep trying to live up to our best self. Thereby we grow. We must not expect ease in our climb toward success.

We all know what it is to miss somebody, and no higher compliment can be paid to any of us than that we are missed by somebody. Such leaders are missed, especally where they have been replaced by those of inferior ability and capacity.

HARRY LIVINGSTON RELF.
Washington, Sept. 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I deplore the death of Huey Long. I think everyone does who has a sense of common decency or regard for human life. But I detest the mental degenerates who knew (they always know) that something tragic would happen when the deceased decried the present Administration.

Please allow me to remind those scandal mongers who are saying that the late Senator's political stand was the direct cause of his assassination, that no cause for the act has been established. The nearest learned reason for the act of Dr. Weiss has been that his family was politically opposed to Mr. Long. Certainly, thinking people will not regard local animosity in the light of national antagonism.

If these mental strays—of whom I have encountered several within the last day or two—keep insisting that a sympathizer of the New Deal had to do with the demise of Mr. Long, may I not be allowed to shove down their gullets—many of which have sucked the milk of well-meant kindness from the present Administration for the past few years—that one Mr. Zangara might have been the puppet of another party when he attempted to exterminate Mr. Roosevelt? One argument is as strong—or as untenable—as the other.

May this sort of new nonsensical prattle be abandoned! Thinking people can't swallow it with a hundred grains of salt!

The Post Impressionist

When The Crown Leads A Revolt.

Post Office, Friday.

THERE has been considerable talk about the possibility of revolution in Italy. There have been few audible whispers about the possibility of a revolution in Ethiopia. Yet the chances of revolution in the latter land are almost as great as those in the former.

* * *

The Italian revolt would result from the failure of Il Duce's African adventure. The Ethiopian revolt would also result from the failure of Il Duce's African adventure—for the Ethiopian revolt would be the result of the Ethiopian Emperor's success against Il Duce.

The Italian revolt would be led by enemies of Mussolini—to upset his system of government. The Ethiopian revolt would be led by Haile Selassie himself—to upset his own system of government.

Nor will it be a bloodless New Deal with a new pack. It will be enforced by arms—against arms.

Outside of Ethiopia, the world considers Ethiopia a state united. And it is at present united against Italy. Its clever ruler is unlikely to imperil that united front so long as there is an alien front united against it. Nevertheless, when—or if—the foreign foe retires, the Emperor will proceed with his own revolution.

In theory, Haile Selassie, as Lion of Judah and King of Kings, is the perfect autocrat. Governmentally, nobody can do anything unless the Emperor orders it. Wearing the Golden Collar of Solomon and seated upon the Alga, the bed-throne, this 45-years-old potentate nominally runs all Abyssinia.

He is his own Premier, his own Secretary for Foreign Affairs; his cabinet members are called, not ministers, but directors. He appoints the members of his Parliament; they must comply with the every wish of the Emperor, who is the only person permitted to speak at its sessions. His country, having no national debt and its sole tax being a tax for the purchase of war munitions, he is paymaster, out of his own pocket, of all state salaries. There are several Liqamaquas to impersonate him at the battle front and draw the enemy's fire, but he is the army's active commander in chief. He is his country's leading merchant, at once its press censor and its newspaper editor.

Well, precisely because he must do all that is to be done, he has not the time, and so fears he may lose the opportunity, to do the half of what he wants to do.

What he wants to do is to abolish the remnants of feudalism in Ethiopia and introduce—albeit under a crown still autocratic—modern civilization. Haile Selassie wants to do for his empire about what the Emperor Meiji did for Japan.

Those remnants of feudalism are, however, stubborn. Their exponents are chieftains of great clans, highly nationalistic, in the feudal sense, but far too loyal to the traditions to the Ethiopian Empire to submit tamely to innovations from any Ethiopian Emperor. According to Ladislas Farago's new book, "Abyssinia on the Eve" (Putnam's), these chiefs are aided by certain members of the imperial cabinet who, for some while, have been "slowing things down," playing at passive sabotage.

Haile Selassie has the enthusiastic support of a group of young Abyssinians whom he has had educated in modern ways, mostly abroad. His opponents have the support of his eldest son.

They intend to resist, when a need for resistance becomes a bit more pressing. The Emperor intends to go ahead, when there is no exterior danger to divert him.

Of course, there is the slim possibility that those feudalists might be made useful to the designs of Italy—but not if they thought such a use would touch their ideal of Ethiopia. On the other hand, Mr. Farago intimates that the Emperor, though otherwise a devout adherent of the National Church, is becoming jealous of it. This could precipitate a catastrophe.

The National Church is dearer to the heart of every Christian Ethiopian than even the Empire itself. Indeed, that Church embodies the historic ideal of a Christian Ethiopian Empire. It alone—throughout the long centuries when the Mohammedan torrent separated Abyssinia from the rest of Christendom—kept the country's freedom as a state. While the deluge of savagery and ignorance beat over the southern borders of the land, the National Ethiopian Church held the national head above water.

If Mr. Farago is correct in the intimation that Haile Selassie will interfere by any means with the Ethiopian Church, then the prediction is ominous—for Haile Selassie.

Most likely, Mr. Farago is not correct. Out of three short months' residence in Abyssinia, he has made an interesting volume. But when he writes that the Emperor proposes to oppose the Imperial Church, Mr. Farago is probably just writing another r into his own name.

Fair Enough

Now, There Is Winnipeg.

OF ALL the hardy pioneers in history it is doubtful that any group ever enjoyed such a heroic and romantic press as those footloose casuals, including bartenders and professional gamblers, as well as laborers, who went to Alaska and the Yukon in the Gold Rush. With the passing of the years their experiences have been glamorized, their sufferings intensified in writings of the "Gawd, how the wind blew!" school, until now it is accepted without question that anyone who lived through a mild autumn snow flurry in the Great Silent Spaces of the North in those days must have been a very special sort of man. Not yet has anyone suggested that all authenticated survivors should be awarded medals, with extra oak leaves for all who came down with chilblains, but that must be merely an oversight.

The pioneers of the Northern Gold Rush were lucky in that Jack London, Rex Beach and Robert W. Service went along to write their story for them. Probably at the time, as they wrestled the dance hall ladies through the stately measures of the cakewalk or bellied up to the bar to take their drams, it did not occur to the pioneers that they were undergoing great hardship. But when, years afterward, the historians of the episode caught the public imagination and the motion pictures portrayed the scene for those millions who are too lazy to read, the boys of the old brigade began to realize what supermen they must have been. They were a comparatively small group, and they enjoyed the distinction which was being conferred on them. Naturally, nobody among them was going to spoil the story by insisting that a real hard winter in Northern Montana or New Hampshire might inflict comparable hardships. The result has been that a member of the Gold Rush alumni never lacks an audience when he feels in a mood to sit down and describe snowdrifts or a cold day.

• • • •

YET if the ladies of the dance halls were able to see it through and children were able to be born and live, that would seem to suggest an inconsistency somewhere. It seems reasonable to believe that it was as cold for these people as for the rough and hardy he-men in their felt socks and woolies. Moreover, so much of the literature of the Gold Rush has to do with gambling houses and saloons warmed to suffocation by pot-bellied iron stoves stoked with pine knots that, upon critical inspection, one is moved to inquire just where the hardship came in.

The thermometers registered 33 below zero in certain Connecticut towns luring a cold snap two years ago, but the children went to school. At Lake Placid, N. Y., where the winter Olympics were held, severe cold is regarded as a commercial asset, as it attracts visitors for the winter sports which can not be fully enjoyed unless the temperature is well below zero. In Minnesota, before the days of the automobile, children plodded through the drifts on foot in very low temperatures, played out of doors until dark and slept in houses which were so cold after the fires died down at night that rime formed on the bed clothes from their breathing.

• • • •

THIS is not to contend that Alaska and the Yukon were exactly tropical in the period dealt with, but merely to point out that, after all, mere cold and physical exertion do not call for stark heroism unless exceptional conditions intervene. There can hardly be a much more miserable cold than that which blows in off Lake Michigan in Chicago in February unless it could be the clammy cold which seeps into the Harvard Stadium at Boston on a November evening after the crowd has left and a few benighted football writers sit blowing on their fingers and trying to compose living, human documents by matchlight.

The suffering of the Gold Rush pioneers, so widely advertised that they would seem to call for superhuman fortitude, can hardly be compared with the trials which were endured by London cockneys in flooded trenches in Belgium during the winters of the war. And for still more painful experiences one might inquire of the Serbian soldiers who were left behind, wounded, feverish and hungry, in a stone building in winter, without a spark of heat for several days between the abandonment of Belgrade by the defenders and the capture of the town by the Germans.

• • • •

THERE were neither poets nor novelists among them, however, so as men who have come through hardship they are far outranked by the Gold Rush pioneers who seem to have put in a considerable portion of their time being devil-may-care around saloons.

It is an unhappy coincidence that of the three pioneers that I have met one was tried for contributing to the delinquency of a child, another served time for moral turpitude and the third was a he-courtesan and one of the most notorious liars that this country has ever produced. All had spent much of their time in the Frozen North hanging around joints, by their own accounts, yet they always agreed that it had been a very trying experience and traded on the fact that they had been members in good standing of the order of hairy-chested sourdoughs.

Now, there is Winnipeg—a right crisp, bracing town in mid-winter. But Winnipeg takes its weather in regular stride, whereas with the proper publicity every man in the place might be able to qualify as a Dan McGrew.

Yeats

By

William Lyon Phelps

WILLIAM BUTLER YEATS, the Irish poet, is 70 years old, having been born in Dublin, June 15, 1865. This summer, a group of distinguished men of letters made a special pilgrimage to the poet to celebrate his birthday.

The late Vachel Lindsay thought Yeats was the greatest living poet in the world, and there are many who believe he is the greatest poet Ireland ever produced.

In 1923 he received the Nobel Prize in literature, with the following inscription—"for his consistently emotional poetry, which in the strictest artistic form expresses a people's spirit."

• • • •

His father was the famous artist, John Butler Yeats, and it was expected originally that William would follow his father's profession. He studied art in London, but his natural genius found a more suitable expression in literature. He has written plays, novels, essays, and his complete works in verse might have taken the title that Tennyson gave his earliest volume "Poems Chiefly Lyrical."

It was in 1900 that I saw on the New York stage his strange play, "The Land of Heart's Desire." Although he has written many plays and has had an important part in the famous Abbey Theater in Dublin, he is not so original or so important a playwright as John M. Synge; but in lyrical poetry he far surpassed Synge.

Hell-Bent For Election

Roosevelt Wants To Be A Clever Hero, Says Warburg.

VI.

By James P. Warburg.

"IT IS not always fair," says Frank R. Kent, who is a good Democrat, "to quote a man's words against him after a long lapse of time. Often, on the spur of the moment, or in the heat of a fight, men say or write things for which they should not be held to too strict accountability. Conditions change and men change with them. No one should be condemned for changing his mind, if he has a sound reason to change."

"Nevertheless," he continues, "men who hope to become President of the United States are expected to weigh their words well and mean what they say. Consistency and steadfastness in the White House are vital to the welfare of the Nation. If the people can not depend upon the promises of their President they are in a bad way. When a President or a candidate for the Presidency, in a prepared speech to the country, makes a solmn pledge and takes a definite and unequivocal stand, the obligation to live up to his words is far heavier than on the ordinary man."

We have seen in the preceding chapter that Franklin D. Roosevelt has failed badly to live up to this obligation.

We have seen very clearly that he did not keep his promises to the people.

But let us be fair. Conditions certainly did change rapidly and drastically during the winter of 1932-33. Not enough, to be sure, to warrant or excuse so complete a reversal nor so manifold a repudiation of solemn pledges as that perpetrated by Mr. Roosevelt, but enough to prevent our stopping right there and saying:

"Oh well; a man who goes back on his promises like that doesn't belong to the White House under any circumstances."

And so we come to the second of the four yardsticks on the basis of which we were going to try to make up our minds about Mr. Roosevelt—namely:

"What are his present purposes and do we agree with them?"

Mr. Walter Lippman once wrote of Mr. Roosevelt that "his mind is not very clear, his purposes are not simple and his methods are not direct."

From my own first-hand observation during several months of close contact in the early days of the Roosevelt Administration I honestly subscribe to this analysis. In fact, I should go a little further on all three counts.

• • • •

I should say that Mr. Roosevelt's purposes consist of three major elements—the desire to be a hero, the desire to give every one a "more abundant life," and the desire to be "clever."

As to the first and last elements—the desire to be a hero and the desire to be clever—I shall have more to say when we come to considering Mr. Roosevelt's individuality—our fourth and last yardstick.

As to the second element, Mr. Roosevelt defined the "social objective" on June 7, 1935, as follows:

"To try to increase the security and happiness of a larger number of people in all occupations of life and in all parts of the country; to give them more of the good things of life; to give them a greater distribution, not only of wealth in the narrow terms but of wealth in the wider terms; to give them places to go in the summer time—recreation; to give them assurance that they are not going to starve in their old age; to give honest business a chance to go ahead and make a reasonable profit, and to give every one a chance to earn a living."

If this definition means anything it means that Mr. Roosevelt's objective is precisely the same as that of any other government. What government would not, if it could do these things, be glad to do them? What statesman, whether radical or reactionary, would not subscribe to this doctrine as a pious hope? How else could Mussolini, or Hitler, or Stalin, or the Emperor Haile Selassie of Abyssinia define his social objective?

But there is more than a mere naive benevolence behind this general purpose. There is the conviction that Franklin Delano Roosevelt knows how to do these things, and that the way to do them is "to be clever" and not let the people in on what is really going on. There is the conviction that, given the widest possible range of "permissive powers"—the Rooseveltian synonym for dictatorial powers—Franklin Delano Roosevelt will be the Moses that leads his people out of the wilderness.

• • • •

BEHIND this apparently vague and harmless statement of purpose there lurks the conviction that it is the proper function of the Federal Government at Washington to manage every detail of the economic life of the Nation in such a way as to give every one his or her proper share of "the good things of life."

Do you see where this leads?

It leads inevitably to the conclusion that "the good things of life" do not include freedom of speech and thought and action—do not, in fact, include any of the liberties which are so carefully guaranteed to us under the Constitution.

Mr. Roosevelt would indignantly deny this implication.

Mr. Roosevelt's enemies would indignantly affirm it and add that, of course, Mr. Roosevelt wants to be a dictator.

My own view is that Mr. Roosevelt's mind—which Mr. Lippmann says is "not very clear"—is so exceedingly unclear that he does not realize that the only way he can possibly do what he wants to do is by being a dictator. And that then he can only do it if, in addition to making himself omnipotent, he can also make himself omniscient.

Once upon a time Mr. Roosevelt realized that the centralization of power in the hands of the Federal Government would inevitably lead to disaster, because it would break down upon the frailty of the human beings in whose hands the power would rest.

Once upon a time Mr. Roosevelt said:

"The doctrine of regulation and legislation by 'master minds,' in whose judgment and will all the people may gladly and quietly acquiesce, has been too glaringly apparent at Washington during these last ten years. Were it possible to find 'master minds' so unselfish, so willing to decide unhesitatingly against their own personal interests or private prejudices, men almost godlike in their ability to hold the scales of justice with an even hand, such a government might be to the interests of the country; but there are none such on our political horizon, and we can not expect a complete reversal of all the teachings of history."

But that was said by Mr. Roosevelt on March 2, 1930, when, as Governor of New York, he was more interested in States' rights than he is today as President of the United States. That was said when Mr. Roosevelt still realized the limitations of human power.

• • • •

MUCH as I dislike to say so, it is my honest conviction that Mr. Roosevelt has utterly lost his sense of proportion. He sees himself as the one man who can save the country, as the one man who can "save capitalism from itself," as the one man who knows what is good for us and what is not. He sees himself as indispensable. And when a man thinks of himself as being indispensable—be it to his family, his business, his city, or his country—that man is headed for disaster.

But—to come back to our question—what are Mr. Roosevelt's present purposes and do we agree with them?

I should say that his foremost purpose was the centralization of power in the Federal Government at Washington. We can see this purpose clearly expressed as to industry in the NRA, as to agriculture in the AAA, as to banking in the Eccles proposals, as to public utilities in the TVA and Wheeler-Rayburn bill, the Guffey bill and others. We can see this purpose as to labor in the Wagner bill, as to "social security" in the FERA, the social security bill, and the Federal Housing Administration. We can see it in countless other expressions and manifestations every day.

Do we agree with this purpose?

We do not. And for reasons which no one has expressed better than Franklin D. Roosevelt at the time when he was Governor of the State of New York.

Here is some more of the speech from which I have just quoted:

"The preservation of this home rule by the States is not a cry of jealous commonwealths seeking their own aggrandizement at the expense of sister States. It is a fundamental necessity if we are to remain a truly united country. The whole success of our democracy has not been that it is a democracy wherein the will of a bare majority of the total inhabitants is imposed upon the minority, but because it has been a democracy where, through a dividing of government into units called States, the rights and interests of the minority have been respected and have always been given a voice in the control of our affairs • • •

"Now, to bring about government by oligarchy masquerading as democracy, it is fundamentally essential that practically all authority and control be centralized in our National Government. The individual sovereignty of our States must first be destroyed except in mere minor matters of legislation. We are safe from the dangers of any such departure from the principles on which this country is founded just so long as the individual home rule of the States is scrupulously preserved and fought for whenever they seem in danger.

"Thus it will be seen that this home rule is a most important thing—the most vital thing—if we are to continue along the course on which we have so far progressed with such unprecedented success. • • •

"Let us remember that from the very beginning differences in climate, soil conditions, habits and mode of living in States separated by thousands of miles, rendered it necessary to give the fullest individual latitude to the individual States. Remembering that the mining States of the Rockies, the fertile savannahs of the South, the prairies of the West and the rocky soil of the New England States created many problems, introduced many factors in each locality which have no existence in others, it is obvious that almost every new or old problem of government must be solved if it is to be solved to the satisfaction of the people of the whole country, by each State in its own way."

• • • •

THAT is my whole case against President Roosevelt's major purpose, far more ably stated by Gov. Roosevelt than I could hope to state it myself.

In conclusion—so far as this second yardstick is concerned—let me make it clear that there are in the Roosevelt program many items with which, as items, I am in thorough sympathy. I believe in better working conditions; in the abolition of child labor; in regulation to protect the public interest in transportation and public utilities; in social insurance; in bank reform, and so forth.

But I do not believe that these things are exclusively or even primarily the concern of Federal Government.

I do not believe in arbitrary authority to "regulate" being vested in men any more than is absolutely necessary.

I do believe in regulation by duly enacted laws.

I believe that the Government's proper function is to act as a referee who sees that the rules are obeyed.

I do not believe the referee should from time to time pick up the ball and run with it himself.

Nor do I believe that the referee should from time to time change the rules of the game, unless a majority of all the players have first agreed to the proposed change.

I believe that Mr. Roosevelt fundamentally means well, that he honestly sees himself as upholding the American tradition, but that he has so hopelessly lost his bearings that he does not realize what road he is on nor where it leads.

For example, he did not realize when he stopped people in the South from planting cotton that they would inevitably use their land to plant something else. They happened to choose peanuts, and as a result, Mr. Roosevelt soon found himself having to pay people not to plant peanuts. Even after this experience he did not realize that when he stopped the planting of peanuts he would be forced inevitably to the next step, which is perhaps the ultimate absurdity; namely, the control of the potato crop.

Most people do not as yet realize that we have on our books a new Federal law under which it is to be made a penal offense for any one to grow more than five bushels of potatoes without a special license; and not only that, but it is a penal offense, punishable by a $1,000 fine or imprisonment for one year, or both, to buy any potatoes which are not either stamped with the special stamp or packed in the special kind of package prescribed by the law.

Mr. Roosevelt would have indignantly denied in 1933 that his AAA program would lead to such a law governing the purchase and sale of potatoes; just as he would doubtless deny with equal indignation today that the laws already enacted will inevitably lead to more and more Federal regulation unless and until the whole program of centralized control is abandoned.

• • • •

I believe that Mr. Roosevelt is so charmed with the fun of brandishing the band leader's baton at the head of the parade, so pleased with the picture he sees of himself, that he is no longer capable of recognizing that the human power to lead is limited, that the "new ideas" of leadership dished up to him by his bright young men in the "Brain Trust" are nothing but old ideas that have been tried before, and that one cannot uphold the social order defined in the Constitution and at the same time undermine it.

Could any President, who had not lost his sense of proportion, have written, as Franklin D. Roosevelt wrote on July 6, 1935, to the chairman of a legislative committee of Congress, urging the passage of a piece of legislation (the Guffey-Snyder coal bill):

"I hope your committee will not permit any doubt as to the constitutionality, however reasonable, to block the suggested legislation"?

Could any President, who had not lost his sense of proportion, have characterized a unanimous decision of the United States Supreme Court (the NRA decision) as putting the country back "to the horse and buggy days"?

"I, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of the President of the United States and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States, so help me God."

Could any man, who swore that oath on March 4, 1933, and who had not lost his sense of proportion, express in no uncertain terms his desire that Congress disregard any doubts, "however reasonable," as to the constitutionality of a measure the passage of which he himself was demanding?

So much for the second yardstick. Most citizens are not particularly interested in the Constitution as a theory. They are interested in the practical advantages and disadvantages of living in a country governed as ours has been governed under the Constitution, or of living in a country where supreme authority is vested in a central government.

What I am saying is that you cannot have both.

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

Charivari.

WE'LL just mosey along the shelf today. Perhaps it's the weather. Perhaps it's because I've gone and got excited about several advance books—reading them all at once the way a lumberjack cookee watches his stoveful of pots. They include a study of China and the Chinese, a new one-volume encyclopedia, a novel of the South today, a novel of ancient India, and a chunky volume on the evolution of psychology, and the point is that they're all ahead and I can't mention them yet. Leaving me feeling like a cocked rifle with double hair triggers . . . By the way, did you know that there are hair triggers set so fine that the weight of the trigger itself, when you point the rifle up in the air, will fire the charge? Or so fine that you can discharge the gun by merely blowing on the trigger? Just one of the incredible niceties of this world.

Right up there at the end of the shelf is the sort of book you'll like, use and live with long after you've loaned most of your novels to your Cousin Tom. William B. Werthner's "Some American Trees: An Intimate Study of Native Ohio Trees" (MacMillan, $5) is a charming piece of work—scientifically accurate, written with informality and zest, and beautifully illustrated by photographs. It's far more than a guide to bark, leaf and flower. Did you know that our hackberry tree is a descendant of the tree which furnished the food of Homer's fabled Lotus-Eaters? This book runs back and forth through literature for such points.

Mr. Werthner—he died before he quite finished the book—lived near Dayton. My Buckeye blood comes from the opposite corner of Ohio, but I feel the kinship. Reading about the walnut tree just now—how it was the wood that Lincoln split into fence-rails, how before the Civil War the finest planks sold at 2 cents a foot, and how it is now more expensive than mahogany and practically off the local market—I glance up at the desk on which this is written: made by my great-grandfather on his Ohio farm, out of solid black walnut, even to the partitions and drawers . . . It was the appeal for walnut wood during the war, to use for gun-stocks and airplane propellers, which occasioned a circular, marking an all-time low of war propaganda, "Make Your Trees Fight," it began.

A FRIEND was telling me the other day how he used to commute from a Connecticut town to New York, which gave him time on the train to read a daily ration of three detective novels! My awe at his consumption is only exceeded by my wonder at the authors' production. But then, up at Bread Loaf I was told that many a writer does from two to four mystery novels a year under as many pseudonyms.

That's one explanation, and another is the invasion of the field by well-known names in other lines. I really thought Admiral Byrd would bring back a detective manuscript from Antarctica. But here is "The Devil's Toy" (Dutton, $2), for present example. Its author is none other than Anita Stewart, screen star of the days when you and I really used to enjoy the movies. She's done a creditable job, too. We've all heard before of the musical show hero who dies after the second act of the dress rehearsal, but Miss Stewart's solution is neat and original.

What's got into Hollywood to make it literary over-night? To be sure, it was last year that Mary Pickford gave us that tender opus, "Why Not Try God?" Now she turns novelist. "The Demi-Widow" (Bobbs-Merrill, $2) has all the ingredients—a theatrical setting with a Paris backdrop, a handsome hero from the Argentine, a bouncing publicity man from Hollywood, a passionate second-team hero from Russia, and a lovely heroine from California, endowed with violet eyes, young widowhood, and the desire to bring up her child amid truth and beauty far from the gaudy tinsel of the world. All this just carries me away. Perhaps it will you.

The Once Over

September Post-Vacation Items.

Penelope and Prudence Wattles, the charming daughters of Col. and Mrs. Potters Wattles, have returned from the seaside and are gradually getting used to appearing in public with some clothes on again.

Tillie McGoggle, stenographer for Schnapps, Schnapps & Schnapps, is back at work, but isn't of much use to the firm. It may be necessary to throw some beach sand around the office and install an artificial moon.

Mr. and Mrs. Jason Foose have returned home after four months at the shore, but are finding it hard to get used to things, inasmuch as the roof doesn't leak and the furniture is quite comfortable.

Janette Wharfell, who spent the last two weeks of August and the first week of September at the seaside, is back in town and is suffering intensely because nobody seems to notice her tan.

Chet Stepney, son of Fire Chief Stepney, who was at the beach all summer, got home yesterday and spent most of this morning putting anti-sunburn oil over his body and strutting before the mirror in his bathing trunks before realizing that he wasn't going anywhere except to work.

These Are the Things.

These are the things I well remember:
Returning to school in early September,
The Katzenjammers and Buster Brown,
The county fair, the circus in town.
Wide lace collars and velvet pants,
The glory of Tinker to Evers to Chance.
Hop Scotch and Prisoner's base,
Antimacassars of Flemish lace.
Fourth of July at 4 a. m.
"Cold root beer—three glasses for ten."
The man about town, the Broadway spender,
Those cigarette pictures of Marquard and Bender.
Becky Thatcher and Injun Joe,
Buffalo Bill and his Wild West Show—
"Oh, you kid, twenty-three skidoo."
These are the things that I once knew.

TICK TOCK.

"Honey in the Horn" is obviously the book of the year from the standpoint of those automobile drivers who never take their finger off the button.

Parental Ambition: 1935.

It used to be a man's intent
For his son to be President;
At least, he thought, a worthy heir
Should strive to be a millionaire.

But, sonny, I'll be overjoyed
If only you're not unemployed,
And, failing this, I'll down my grief
If you get adequate relief.

Barnum Freak, He Gave Much To Amusement

Redheads Have Chance to See Fox Free; a Plea for Revivals.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Gerald G. Gross,

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

This morning we give you Melvin D. Hildreth who, in turn, gives you Jumbo.

The account by Mr. Hildreth, one of the most devout circus fans in this country today, of the death of Jumbo may bear little relation to the contemporaneous stage and screen; it isn't necessary to alibi that the world's most famous elephant was cast, through the use of a "double," in "The Mighty Barnum" or that he gives his name to a musical show opening next month in New York or that he has inspired hundreds of other ideas in the field of amusement. We give you Mr. Hildreth because Sunday is the fiftieth anniversary of Jumbo's death, because Mr. H.'s authentic description of the elephant's last moments is a genuine thriller and because we can't resist passing on a good animal story.

"Fifty years ago this September 15, The Washington Post headlined the death of an unusual animal," begins today's guest columnist.

"On Tuesday, September 15, 1885, at St. Thomas, Ontario, Canada, occurred the death of Jumbo. The news was cabled all over the world and for some time almost monopolized public attention. Hundreds of letters and telegrams were received in sympathy; English newspapers and people mourned his loss.

"It was a little later than 8:30 in the evening when Jumbo was being led to his car along the tracks of the Grand Trunk Railroad. A westbound freight had been expected and a signalman was sent up the tracks to flag down the incoming train. But the train was late and the signalman stopped to watch the job of loading Jumbo. Suddenly, about 300 yards away, the train was seen coming. Its headlight was on. The sounding of the whistle first attracted the attention of those who were along the track watching the animals being loaded.

Race for Life.

"The signalman, as soon as he saw the train coming, sprinted on in a mad dash, frantically waving his lantern trying to get the train to stop. However, the train was coming along a down grade and with the hand brakes of 50 years ago it was impossible to stop in the 300 yards between it and Jumbo.

"The brakes squealed and the whistle shrieked its warning. Mathew Scott, accompanying Jumbo, together with William H. Blackburne, now head keeper of the National Zoological Park, turned the elephant and headed him down the tracks ahead of the train.

"A deep ditch was on one side and they were afraid that with the speed Jumbo was making he would kill himself by the terrific drop if he were turned off the tracks. They continued in an effort to outrace the train.

"As Jumbo dashed along the tracks, it apparently occurred to him to attempt to move into the opening between the two sections of the circus train, but at the speed he was going, he missed the opening altogether and went tearing on at least two car lengths. The engine was only a few yards in his rear when Jumbo suddenly dug his forefeet into the cinders, came abruptly to a stop and began to turn ponderously about to the north, facing into the parked circus car. If he had swerved in the opposite direction he would have dropped down a 10-foot embankment and would have escaped.

Celebration on Sunday.

"A moment later the engine struck Jumbo. Screaming with pain, he went down between the side of the engine and the circus train, his enormous head jammed backward against the wheels and trucks of one of the circus cars. The engine, its tender and a box car were derailed and Jumbo, unable to move, lay wedged between the circus train and the wheels of the freight. Mathew Scott and William Blackburne went close to him, but five minutes later the great elephant was dead.

"Although this event occurred 50 years ago, it will be fittingly observed in St. Thomas on Sunday, and all of those now living who were present at the occasion will return to the scene of the accident.

"In spite of the fact that it has been half a century since Jumbo died, and although he remained on exhibition, alive, only three years, the fame of this tremendous animal whose sale caused an international furor still remains forever fixed as the elephant that furnished a new word to the English language.

"In an old, red brick building facing the campus at Tufts College at Medford, Mass., rests the stuffed hide of the lordly Jumbo. Behind him, in a niche, is the white marble bust of Barnum.

"If the world has forgotten where Jumbo rests, and where Barnum rests, the world has not forgotten the name of either."

The first 25 red-haired girls who present themselves at the doors of Loew's Fox Theater tomorrow morning will be admitted free. Manager Gene Ford made the announcement last night, attaching only one string, which is that applicants must be between the age of 16 and 30. (Look for trouble when he begins quizzing women on their years or when suspicion arises that someone dyed to be a hedhead deadhead. The picture: "Redheads on Parade."

Wants More Revivals.

"As long as there is so much tender sentiment," writes Mr. Frank Ford Burnet, "brewing among the movie fans, I think we ought to strike for more revivals. 'Smilin' Through' evidently met with some response at least; and I believe older pictures would be more successful. The mists of the years ought to work miracles.

"I am a confirmed pessimist regarding new movies; I meet with few thrills among the eternal-triangle, soupy-romance, G-men, sentimental tales, not to mention absurd musical romances. Past years brought their usual low percentage of really first-rate pictures, and we might do well to see those few again. May I suggest that you sound your readers on the idea, and see if they would not enjoy seeing some of the older movies again?

"Parenthetically, I don't think it makes any difference what happens to be playing at movie houses. Numbers of my acquaintances remark, 'Well, I guess I'll go to the Fox tonight.' When I ask what's playing, they say, 'I don't know.' What they mean is, 'I don't care.' So why not slip up on them?

"Three pictures I failed to see originally I should like to see revived: 'Beau Geste,' 'The Desert Song' and 'Scaramouche.'"

Parenthetically, we think revivals are not more common because they're too much of a box-office gamble and that very few persons set out for a certain theater without knowing or caring, what is playing there.

About Coming Films.

At least one-third of the 60 pictures to be made by Warner Bros.-First National in 1935-36 will be based on adventure, according to Vice President Jack L. Warner . . . Alexander Korda, recently arrived from the Continent to become an owner-producer of United Artists, is scheduled to reach New York this morning, ending a flight from Hollywood . . . H. G. Wells' screen play, "100 Years to Come," is now known as "Things to Come" . . . production will be finished soon . . . "A Thousand Dollars a Minute," based on the Saturday Evening Post story, will go on the fire (not in the fire) next week . . . it will be a Republic picture . . . Clyde Beatty, who can make lions and tigers get along together as agreeably as ham and eggs, will make a 15-episode serial called "Dark Continent."

Leonard Schloss will climb into an airplane cabin today and, it won't be the airplane ride at Glen Echo Park, of which he is manager. Rather, he and Mrs. Schloss will be embarking upon a trip to California by transport airliner, a trip conceived by his 200 employes who wished to pay tribute to Mr. Schloss' 25 years of service as manager of Glen Echo.

While out West the couple will visit Hollywood, the San Diego Exposition and San Francisco, where Mr. Schloss was born and where, as a boy, he broke into the show business as an usher in the Bush Street Theater.

Members of the Variety Club, Glen Echo employes and other friends will converge on Washington airport this afternoon to wish the Schlosses bon voyage.

That Madcap Brown.

"I'm not going to let you do it, Joe!"

This, unmistakably, was the voice of Busby Berkeley, directing the filming of "Bright Lights."

"That's what you think. I'm going to do it," replied the mouthy Mr. Brown.

The company found out what it was all about when the camera and lights were set up for the next sequences. Then the star comedian personally did a dangerous leap from an upper box, swinging on a curtain rope, and taking a nasty fall. It was a scene that had been originally scheduled for a stunt man.

"He insists in doing all the dangerous stuff," sighed Mr. Berkeley.

Then Brown picked himself up from the stage floor and grinned.

"I'm not hurt."

Past and Present.

The Roadside Players, specialists in turning back the clock—witness "To Die at Dawn," "The Henrietta" and such productions of theirs this season as go back 30 years or more—do it even in their handouts.

To wit:

"With the Roadside's first love, melodrama, taking its final filing in the old red barn this week, those dispenders of summer theater entertainment are about to wind up their season with a week's return of the play whose popularity transcended even that of melodrama—'Trilby.' With Denis Connell and Carey Lucas again in the leading roles, the dramatization of the famous nineteenth century novel will open Monday, July 15, for the last week of the season."

What is meant, of course, is September 16. The Monday can stand as is.

Making-Good-in-City Note.

Marjorie Mitchell, tap dancer veteran of the 1933 and 1934 "Going Native" productions at Loew's Fox, has signed a contract to join the "Anything Goes" company in New York, according to her letter to Gene Ford, manager of the Fox.

Concord Girl Wed in Ohio.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Liquor Ruling Expected To Reduce Court Cases

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., Sept. 12.—A ruling by Judge Henry C. Leigh, in the corporation court, that the State must show untaxed liquor was purchased in the State after the effective date of the ABC law is expected to reduce the number of liquor prosecutions.

Judge Leigh said that he was following Attorney General Staples' interpretation of the statute.

Two appellants from the police court were set free on the court's ruling.

Cream Evolved To Give Effect Of a Massage

Price Includes Cleansing Preparation of Finest Quality.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IN DAYS OF OLD, men and women who wanted to preserve the charm of their early years used to dream of a magic fountain of youth which would smooth away their wrinkles and give them back the freshness and glow which was theirs at 20.

We in modern times are more practical. Instead of vainly wishing for a wonderful fountain, we have gone to work and evolved creams and lotions which, when used regularly, cause the telltale lines and crows feet to vanish like magic.

Such a wonder-working cream may be found on sale at a local department store. Left on the face for 20 minutes or three-quarters of an hour, it has all the effect of a vigorous massage, leaving the skin as ruddy and glowing as after a long walk on a cold day. Even the most sluggish circulation won't be able to resist its sterling qualities.

This marvel also possesses rejuvenating chemicals which nourish the tissues and make them firm and healthy again. Applied in the evening before going out, it will give your face such a rested look that no one would ever suspect that by day you are a hardworking housewife or the right-hand woman of some big business man.

Bearing out the saying that all good things come in twos, along with this amazing cream comes a jar of cleansing cream of the finest quality. It may be found in two separate bottles, one for dry and one for oily skins. And all for the surprising price of $1.

Eau-de-Cologne Bargain.

THE SAME STORE is offering an unusual value in a well-known brand of eau-de-cologne. It's of the finest quality, and delicately scented. The bottle itself is so handsome that you will invent all kinds of excuses to use it after its present contents are exhausted. The price is $1.50.

Garment for Reducing.

HAS THE LAZY life of summer added a few unwelcome pounds around your hips and legs? Did your friends greet you upon your return from vacation with surprised stares and cries of "My, how fat you've grown?"

In any case, whether you're already more than pleasantly plump, or whether you just want to keep from getting so, you'll be interested in the grand reducing garment on sale at a downtown store. This garment is different from most of this type in that it comes complete in one outfit including brassiere, girdle, and garters.

Lastex around the top keeps the garment firmly in place. The shoulder straps are adjustable, so that it can be easily adapted to either tall or short persons. Comes in sizes 32 to 48, and costs $2.

Paris Inspired Jewelry.

THE ARISTOCRATIC glimmer of sterling silver, and the gay sparkle of glittering marquisite go to make up the unusual jewelry featured at a downtown store this month. The designs are Paris inspired, and lovely indeed. They come in matching sets of clips and earrings, bracelets and brooches, and cost $1. Just the thing to add a dashing note to your fall costume.

Kit for the Traveler.

FOR $3.75, you'll find everything but the kitchen stove in a grand little kit on sale at an F street store. This kit fits in a rubber bag containing soap and washrag, an eye bath, skin freshener, cleansing cream, powder, fingernail polish, toothbrush and paste, and tissues. Who could ask for more on a long journey than the essentials included in this handy bag? The traveler will have everything she wants, all concentrated into as small a space as possible. It comes in a stunning blue, lined with a deep rose.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 323, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Youngster Likes to Feel As Well-Dressed as Pal

Those dear old golden rule days are almost here again, and Johnnie could add any of the above to his wardrobe, combining smartness, serviceability and reasonable price. Descriptions below.

For Lad in His 'Teens Polo Shirts, French Style Raincoats and Pleated Slacks Are Practical; Flannel Suit Fine for Smaller Boy.

By John Q. Alexander.

SCHOOL, like prosperity and the neighborhood delicatessen, is just around the corner. Little Alfie, who has been running barefoot all summer, with just a bathing suit or a pair of ragged shorts between him and the elements, will have to don real clothing. Cleanliness is not only next to godliness, but the next best thing to a big red apple for getting in the good graces of the village schoolmarm.

It may be a wrench to separate Alfie from his cowboy suit, but it must be done. He must appear scrubbed and shining when the bell rings, and look as well if not better than the kids next door.

School togs should be, first of all, serviceable. The same boys who went forth at 9 clean as a whistle unencumbered, will arrive home at 3 or 4 disheveled, grimy, and with pockets full of marbles, bits of string, apple cores and tadpoles. The wear and tear is terrific.

Second in importance is appearance. Children should look well in their clothes, for their own sake and for the sake of others who have to look at them. Surprisingly enough, the precious young 'uns of today take a real interest in their haberdashery at an early age. Therefore it is important that they be dressed well from the beginning, so that they will develop a discriminating taste in later years.

Polo Shirt for Boys in Teens.

Polo Shirts—Can't be beat for knock-about wear, and these have long sleeves. Warmer than an ordinary shirt. Zipper or button front, in Jersey and other weaves. Blue, tan, gray or green. 79 and 88 cents each.

Raincoats—Trench coat style, gabardine, with leather buttons and (here's the pay-off) epaulets on the shoulder, with "G-Men" implanted thereon, in metal. The kid who could resist this doesn't live. Water-repellant, of course, and lined with plaid. And you can get it in navy blue, which doesn't soil easily. $3.95, sizes 6 to 16.

Bathrobes—Unusually good assortment. The best one was of black, red and cream hound's tooth checks, with a wide shawl collar, cuffs and belt of maroon. Flannel, yours for $4.95. Others are $3.95

Slacks—These have pleats, which all young men demand, and are available in a wide variety of patterns in flannel, cheviot and other fabrics. Well cut and well tailored, and the smart new window-pane checks are included. Best feature is a concealed elastic strip at the back which makes them fit snugly and comfortably without a belt, no matter now the wearer squirms. $2.95 to $4.95.

Shirts—In this regard the lads are very definite about their likes and dislikes. Most of them want tab or button-down collars—which is as it should be. Both types are smart and entirely practical. They stay in place, and therefore stay clean and fresh looking longer than the ordinary kind. This store has the button-down type in blue or white oxford, for $1.50 each, sizes 12½ to 14½. The tab shirt comes in stripes and plain colors—all stripes woven in. Same price, same sizes.

Windbreakers—Newest things (illustrated) is of horsehide, which is warm and wears forever. This one has a generous fur collar, and fur panels at front and back. Zipper front. Elegant sleeve arrangement—an inner cuff of knit wool which hugs the wrist and prevents snow, wind, hail, etc., from creeping in. And if the wearer grows a couple of inches before next year it won't matter because the cuff can be turned down—a new and practical note. Pure wool lining, and an ingenious belt at the waist which sort of seals you in. $12.75.

For the smaller boy we recommend:

Flannel Suit for Small Boy.

Flannel Suit—Of English cut, and should be worn with an Eton cap, if possible. Navy blue is the best color. The material is extra-fine, and here's a smart idea—it comes with two pairs of trousers, a pair of shorts for mild weather and a pair of knickers for cold weather. Rougher fabrics available, if you prefer. $12.75.

Sweaters—Solid colors, of fine zephyr wool—useful and ornamental. Two contrasting stripes of color at cuff and pocket led a note of cheer, and the back is well tailored with inverted pleat and half-belt. Full zipper front. The same store has a swell assortment of others for from $2 to $7.50.

Regimental Ensemble—This sounds high-falutin', and looks the same. Consists of a sweater of horizontal regimental stripes (in wonderful colors), well-cut flannel shorts and an Eton blouse to complete the outfit. Good quality of material and workmanship throughout, $3.95.

Sailor Suit—For young tars. Regulation big sailor collar, with three white stripes, blouse with half-zipper and knit sleeve cuffs and waistband, and trousers (long, of course) with the regular seaman's booby-hatch front arrangement. They'll alter the trousers to fit your little cherub at no extra cost, and throw in a whistle on a string which he can tuck into his breast pocket, $3.95, and becoming to nine out of ten youngsters.

Encyclopedia for Pupil.

Our discovery of the week, is a new two-volume encyclopedia. Nothing like an encyclopedia for instilling a desire for knowledge in the children. Most encyclopedias cost around $100. This one costs $5.98 for the two volumes. It is up to date, covering everything from the birth of the universe to today's high spots. Four million words, 16 pages of maps in four colors, 2,100 illustrations, nearly 5,000 pages in all. Many new articles on the latest developments of science, world affairs, politics and the arts are included. Every child should have one, if he is to grow up to be President.

Mr. Alexander's articles, written exclusively for The Post, appear on this page every Friday. For information on men's fashions, or for the names of the shops carrying the merchandise described above, call NAtional 4200, branch 323. Or write, inclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

Woman Writes to Tell "Diurnal" of Interesting Club She's Found Here.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: This is in response to "Diurnal," whose letter appeared in your column Monday, September 9. What "Diurnal" seeks (i. e., pleasant cultural activities to occupy her daytime leisure, since she is a wife with neither job nor children) is something I, too, have been seeking for these 20 years, here in the East as well as on the West Coast.

And I am happy to say there is here in Washington the answer to that need. The idea was conceived by the most charming young woman I have ever met, one with a social, cultural and educational background. She is Miss Pauline de Brodes (my instructor in a foreign language) and she is working on plans to create a social and cultural club. She lives at 1855 Ontario place northwest, and her telephone number is Adams 1726.

• • • •

The cultural opportunities offered by this club are a thrilling challenge to me, and I have already selected several studies, among them French and chess. There are a number of persons enthusiastic about this club, and it was through a feature article which appeared on your Post Woman's Page that I learned of the work she is doing. I feel that through your column, however, it may be still more widely introduced.

• • • •

I have lived in the New England States, the South, New York, the West Coast and Honolulu, and being of the studious type as well as one who yearns for recreation, I have been a veritable Diogenes minus the lantern, looking everywhere for something like this club. The project has developed beyond the embryo stage and offers intelligent, culturally and recreationally minded men and women a stimulating program of activities for both daytime and evening.

• • • •

This letter of mine is intended only as a hand across the void from one "forgotten woman" to another.

Sincerely,
(Mrs.) J. F. YOHANNA OETTL.

Basis for Enthusiasm.

DEAR MRS. OETTL: It so happens that I, too, have met Miss de Brodes and have discussed with her program of social and cultural activities she is devising for the diversion and instruction of Washingtonians. My contact with her leads me to believe you have not eulogized too highly either her own pleasing personality or her qualifications for conducting the interesting project she is promoting. I think both "Diurnal" and Miss de Brodes may be grateful to you for taking the initiative in calling their attention to each other. M. H.

In Re Delphian Society.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: In your column of Monday, September 9, I read the letter from "Diurnal." If you have her address you may refer her to Mrs. Eleanor A. Wilson, 1604 Q street northwest, telephone NOrth 1142. Mrs. Wilson is field secretary for the Delphian Society in Washington. This suggestion may supply a lead which "Diurnal" can follow in obtaining the answer to her need of constructive social activities. I am sure Mrs. Wilson will be glad to talk with her. I am president of one of the chapters here and have found the work most delightful.

Sincerely, MRS. G. F. C.

• • • •

DEAR MRS. G. F. C.: Since I do not have the address or telephone number of the woman who signed her letter "Diurnal," I am taking the liberty of publishing your suggestion, hoping thus to bring it to her attention. Thank you for your kindness in submitting it. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Avoid Leaving A Child Alone In Parked Car

By Alice Clarissa Richmond,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

MRS. SMITH had 6-year-old Tommy with her in the car when she went marketing. She stepped into the grocer's for a moment and left the car with the engine running as she had done a dozen times before. Tommy had been trained not to touch gears or pedals, and was a very obedient and biddable child.

His mother had, however, failed to reckon on the odd chance. Today Tommy was burning under the indignity of some disparaging remarks made by a friend of his. The other small boy declared that he could drive, and laughed at Tommy for never having touched the wheel.

In the few minutes that his mother's back was turned, the child slipped into the driver's seat, stepped on the clutch, and put the car in gear. Then, frightened at his daring, he reached for the brake, and in his excitement hit the accelerator instead.

No one can be sure of what is passing through a child's mind. To count too implicitly on running true to precedent may be to court castastrophe.

Calcium Supply Indispensable To the System

Deficiency Causes Derangement of Important Body Functions.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

WE are inclined to disregard as unimportant anything and everything that is common and immediately at hand. When we think of medicines we often erroneously ascribe miraculous powers to drugs that are rare, difficult to obtain, and expensive. Thus calcium has been a negected element, because no one wished to think that all his body needed was limestone (calcium carbonate). Nevertheless calcium is needed—just how badly we did not realize until fine haired chemical methods allowed us to estimate accurately the amount of usable calcium in the blood. This method is now known to physicians, and studies have revealed that whenever the supply of calcium is low many important body functions are deranged.

Most of us know that calcium forms the larger portion of the bony skeleton. We also know that it exists in the bones in such form that it can easily be withdrawn if needed. It is moved practically with the ease of a train on a track and with almost the same precision. We may compare it, in a way, to the glycogen stored in the liver, that is brought out by the blood and used by the body. If the liver is robbed of glycogen the normal amount must be replaced through food, just as calcium borrowed from the bones must be restored.

Calcium Indispensable.

There are so many demands for calcium that it is literally indispensable. It is necessary for the action of nerves and muscles, and for the contraction of the heart. It modifies the behavior of certain drugs. Another important property, pointed out by Cantraw, is that it diminishes the power of certain substances to pass through cell membranes. Cantarow notes that this phenomenon may be tested by any one in the folowing manner: A slice of red beet root is placed in ordinary water. The red pigment will remain in the beet cells. But when the same slice is transferred to a dilute solution of sodium chloride (common salt) the pigment will leave the cells and the solution will become red. If a small quantity of calcium has been added to the salt solution the pigment will not leave the plant and the solution will remain colorless.

Vital to Mother's Diet.

Many observers have pointed out that the diet of the average individual is deficient in calcium. This is accounted for by the fact that although we use milk products, such as butter, cream, etc., freely, yet in order to obtain the best source of calcium, which is milk, whole milk must be used. The diets of most of us, according to many authorities, contain less than half the amount of calcium actually needed.

Deficiency of this substance is particularly noticeable during pregnancy and the nursing period. The mother's body loses calcium not only in providing the bony frame of the developing child, but in supplying food for the nursing infant. Unless calcium is added to the mother's diet many symptoms of calcium deficiency will be noted—for example, emotional upsets, muscular cramps, and loss of teeth.

Prospective Entrants In Contest Assured Of Its Simplicity

DON'T LET the subject of The Post's recipe contest this week put a damper on your spirits. It sounds complicated, but it is really simple. Readers have been asked to submit an economical dinner menu. Every woman who keeps house must have several of these dinner menus that she relies upon to keep her expenses within bounds. Merely write out one of them, including meat, or meat substitute, vegetables and dessert with two recipes, one for the main dish and the other for the dessert, and submit it to Dorothea Duncan, care of The Washington Post. Mail recipe in time for it to reach this office not later than Saturday morning.

Twelve prizes of $1 each will be awarded. And remember that if you win a $1 prize your recipe will be entered in the final judging to select three winners for the grand prizes offered by The Washington Post and the National Electric Supply Co.

Air Travel Is the Life, Says Plane Stewardess

Her job requires her to travel at the rate of 3 miles a minute during working hours! Miss Beatrice Drader, hostess for the American Air Lines, ministers to the comfort of the passengers on board.

Post Staff Photo.

By Dudley Harmon.

"SHE FLIES through the air with the greatest of ease——"

This variation of the well-known popular song is applicable not only to agile artists of the trapeze, but also to the intrepid young women who have adopted the new career of air hostess. Aviation lines are making increasing use of the services of these stewardesses to soothe nervous passengers, describe the route to them, serve hot lunches, and in general contribute to the comfort of the journey.

Miss Beatrice Drader, hostess for the American Air Lines, has flown 175,000 miles in 14 months, and has spent 1,500 hours in the air. Every bit of the route from Fort Worth, Tex., to New York City, and from New York City to Memphis, Tenn., is an old story to Miss Drader. She can tell passengers the name of every river, mountain peak, and city over which they pass. She knows at every moment at what height and speed the plane is traveling, and she can make a frightened passenger forget his fears and worries.

To be able to serve in such a capacity, air hostesses must fulfill rigid requirements, according to Miss Drader. The American Air Lines requires its stewardesses to be between 21 and 25 years of age, no taller than 5 feet 4 inches in height, and not over 120 pounds in weight. Also, they must be unmarried.

Airsickness Is Rare.

In addition, the air stewardess must be a registered nurse. If a passenger becomes air sick, or is stricken with acute appendicitis, she must immediately recognize the symptoms and know the remedies.

It is only rarely that a passenger becomes air sick, however, says Miss Drader, and her chief duty is to soothe the occasional nervous and frightened. The technique required in such a case, according to the young hostess, consists in trying to get the passenger's mind off his fears. Hence, the hostesses must be well-informed and mentally alert enough to discuss current events ranging from the Italo-Ethiopian feud to the World Series. When a woman begins to moan that she wishes she had never left terra firma, Miss Drader is right there with some diverting topic to make her forget her anxiety.

Miss Drader herself is never frightened, she says. She believes that air travel is even safer than automobile or train. "Fortunately, however," she said, knocking on wood as she spoke, "I have not yet been in any severe storms. Occasionally we've encountered a slight disturbance, but even then I wasn't the least bit nervous."

Enjoys Nomadic Life.

Miss Drader spends two days a week in Memphis, and one night a week in New York City. The rest of the time she is either traveling through the air at the rate of 3 miles a minute or catching up on sleep at a hotel en route. She enjoys her nomadic life. "One gets acquainted with a variety of cities," she said, "and one soon makes enough friends here and there to keep loneliness away."

Sample Menu Dishes Include Two Seafoods

Oyster Stew Is Suggested for Luncheon, Filet of Sole for Dinner.

By Dorothea Duncan.

COOLER weather will bring even a greater selection of seafood to Washington markets. Right now we are anxiously awaiting sword fish steaks and salt water oysters. Sword fish already has made its debut in a small way this season, but it is purchased in small amounts and only when the weather is cool as it spoils readily in warm weather. Oysters are coming in this month, but you will find that most of them are shucked fresh daily and sold in their liquor, rather than in the shell. Later the large, choice oysters for serving on the half-shell will make their appearance.

You might like to try an oyster stew for luncheon if the day is cool or an oyster pie for dinner today especially if your family has been anxiously awaiting the return of the oyster season.

Croakers and fish filets (haddock, sole, etc.) are moderately priced and are the best buys this week of the assortment of fish found in the stores. Fried filet of sole with tartar sauce makes an excellent dinner selection for those who like a white, dry and mildly-flavored fish.

Painted Landscapes For Blinds Advocated

The interior decorating-conscious housewife who has just adjusted herself to the more or less general acceptance of Venetian blinds must now become accustomed to seeing them finished in a design in keeping with the room they adorn.

Decorators are advocating painted landscapes for blinds. Floral motifs or Chinese eighteenth century scenes frequently appear. These designs are usually carried out in monotone, but such combinations as light pink or dull red on warm buff are effective.

The security of a car that "can take it"—

How do you drive?

Are you able to sit back in a relaxed position with your hands just resting on the wheel, fully confident that your car is ready for a split second swerve to the left or the right—a sudden acceleration or a twenty-foot stop?

Or—do you find yourself tense, hands with a death grip on the wheel, and a scowl on your face, worried to death for fear that any second the "innards" of the old bus will let go and send you to Kingdom Come?

Give yourself a break and get a car than "can take it."

You will find plenty of them and mighty reasonable prices on the page opposite the comics.

CARLTON

FALL SUEDES ARE "FASHION-FIRSTS"

● At the opening today you'll be charmed with these "Fashion-Firsts." For each Carlton style is chosen because it is an important Fall Shoe fashion. See the smartest of high-riding suede step-in pumps with a bit of a gold ornament, high-cut, six-eyelet oxfords with alligator accents, that "high fashion," the wide-strapped oxford, and that party "belle," the sandal. Suede! Combined with kid or calf! Black, brown, and the lovely new green and Burgundy.

September PAY DAY SALE

USED CARS

Buying a used car now is like buying an overcoat in March. The big difference is that you can use the car just as much as you could at the beginning of the season. This is the end of the season for automobiles. It's nearing the time for the new models. That is why you can now buy good cars and recent models so reasonably.

This pay day sale especially means even lower prices.

See what the well spent dollar will buy—on the page opposite the comics this morning—

Scout Visitors Exceed 3,000 This Summer

D. C. Guide Corps Nearly as Busy as if Jamboree Had Been Held.

More than 3,000 Boy Scouts from all parts of the world visited Washington this summer, despite cancellation of the International Jamboree because of the infantile paralysis scare, headquarters here announced yesterday.

The Jamboree Guide Corps was almost as busy as it would have been had the jamboree been official, it was pointed out by officials of this group. Now it is to continue on a permanent basis under the District of Columbia council training committee.

The two council summer camps have had the greatest season in their history. Camp Roosevelt closed its ten weeks with a total representation of 118 troops during the season. The ten-week period was one week longer than the camp had ever been open before. Camp Wilson will close tomorrow.

Court of Awards Scheduled.

The first quarterly court of awards will be held Saturday, September 21, at the Powell School. Awards for the summer's work will be granted. One of the items at this court will be the presentation of the gold quill award to Howard Ennis, jr., assistant scoutmaster of Troop 79, and Donald N. Carpenter, scoutmaster of Troop 52. These are the second and third awards of the gold quill, the first having been given to John Deitz, of Troop 23, last spring. The award is given for service in journalism. Several other Scouts have made considerable advancement in this field during the past year, among them Dick Godfrey and Joe Rose, coeditors of the Camp Roosevelt Rough Rider, and John D. Chander, editor of the Camp Wilson Camper. More than 20 troop papers are being operated by Scouts of the council.

Training Courses in Mendham.

A series of training courses for Scout officials is scheduled at the Mortimer Schiff Reservation at Mendham, N. J., by the National Boy Scout Council. Washington leaders interested in the various courses have been invited. The first course for those desiring information on cubbing will be held October 13 to 17, senior program course from November 17 to 21 and a course in council alternatives from November 22 to 26. The winter camping course will be held December 13 to 16.

Scouts have been asked to assist the Red Cross in the distribution of posters prior to the campaign. Volunteers should report to Mrs. Johnson, 1418 H street northwest, tomorrow at 9 a. m.

Constitution Day will be observed by Scouts, starting with exercises at the Scout meeting tonight and continuing to September 17, when Scouts will assist in the city-wide exercises.

Travel Talks Are Heard At Kiwanis Luncheon

Norway's midnight sun, the cleanliness and beauty of all Scandinavia and the museums of Soviet Russia were described in a talk to the Kiwanis Club at its luncheon in the Mayflower Hotel yesterday by R. L. Pollio, manager of the hostelry, recently returned from a trip through northern Europe.

Mr. Pollio told the Kiwanians he was much impressed by the new Moscow.

Mark Lansburgh, jr., who returned recently from a tour of the Mediterranean countries, also spoke on his travels. Past President Louis Breuninger presided.

Mondell Forfeits $10.

William Harmon Mondell, 31, son of former Representative Frank Mondell, of Wyoming, forfeited $10 in Police Court yesterday rather than stand trial on a charge of being drunk. Mondell was arrested Tuesday when he was found in a barrel near the Spanish Embassy after his car is alleged to have crashed into two automobiles owned by embassy attaches.

Three Held on Charge Of Stealing Pavement

"You are charged with feloniously taking, stealing and carrying away the pavement on Van street southeast. How do you plead?"

So said the clerk in Police Court yesterday when Thomas Marsh, Thomas Taylor and Samuel Johnson, colored, were arraigned before Judge Robert E. Mattingly on a charge of larceny from the District of Columbia government.

They were ordered held under $2,000 bond each for the action of the grand jury after Detective Watson Salkeld testified he caught the men pulling up the bricks from Van street. He further told the court that about 3,000 bricks had been removed and sold to a wrecking company for $8.20.

Nice Denies State Shirks on Relief; Challenges FERA

Gross Sales Tax Meets All U. S. Demands, Governor Says.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 12. — Charges that the Federal Government has carried nearly all Maryland's relief load were promptly met today by declarations that the State had furnished all the money requested by the Federal authorities last winter.

Aubrey Williams, assistant to Harry Hopkins, Federal relief administrator, made the statement that most of the State's relief burden had been borne by Federal funds. He was talking to a delegation of the People's Unemployment League which went to Washington to protest recent cuts in Maryland's relief allotment.

The defense was made by Gov. Harry W. Nice when he was told of Williams' charges. He declared that everybody in Maryland was interested in solving the relief situation and denied that the State should be carrying more of the burden.

"Buck-Passing" Charged.

Williams told the P. U. L. delegation:

"We actually have cut relief in Maryland less than any other State. There's been a great job of buck-passing. Let the State do the decent thing. You've come to the wrong place. Maryland has a fine credit rating and can borrow. We've carried nearly the whole burden."

The P. U. L. delegation was protesting a recent cut of $75,000 in the Federal allotment to Maryland for the first half of September. The reduction caused a slash in relief allowances for food.

After reading Williams' statement, Gov. Nice said:

"I do not care to comment on the statement of Mr. Williams other than to say that I used my every and best effort to have passed by the Legislature a retail consumers' sales tax of 2 per cent. The Legislature, not seeing eye to eye with me, passed the gross sales tax which is now in operation and is producing the amount demanded by the Federal authorities as our contribution to relief problems.

Hits Inferance State Is Rich.

"Unfortunately the impression is abroad that Maryland is a rich State and capable of doing more than the facts permit us to do. Like people over the United States, our backs are almost broken through taxation of every kind and description. We have been doing our part and will continue to do it.

"It must be borne in mind that Maryland can not borrow without the sanction of the Legislature and while its credit is now excellent—its bonds recently sold at a figure higher than every before received in the history of the State—that only spells the confidence of the investor in the integrity of our citizens, and does not warrant the assertion that we are rich. We are nothing of the sort. But we do have just as much of the milk of human kindness in our veins as can be found anywhere in the world.

"I do hope that Mr. Williams can obtain facts to substantiate the statements and make him our friend as he has ever been."

Baker Family to Hold Reunion September 29

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Sept. 12. — The tenth annual reunion of the Baker family will be held Sunday, September 29, it was announced today. The reunion, which was to have been held earlier, was postponed because of prevalent infantile paralysis. It will be held at St. Stephens Church, 5 miles northwest of Strasburg.

E. E. Baker, Winchester; Mrs. R. H. Hamman, Strasburg, and Mrs. Minnie Strickler, of New Market, are in charge of the program. It was announced today that the Rev. Melvin Baker and Harry P. Baker will make addresses. R. H. Baker is president of the association.

New Guinea Plane Tested at Hagerstown

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 12 (AP).—An especially equipped amphibian plane, for use by a group of New York scientists in an aerial research expedition into New Guinea, was undergoing final tests at a local plant here today.

The plane, a single-motored, eight-passenger craft, with an expected cruising speed of 150 miles an hour, was outfitted for Richard Archbold, of the New York Museum of Natural History, who will lead the expedition.

Here to observe finishing touches put on the plane, Archbold said his party would bring back new species of plants and animals from the little-explored island below the Philippines.

The trip probably will get under way early next year, Archbold said.

Verdict Due On Legality Of Tribunal

Circuit Bench Decides Validity of People's Court Today.

Humphrey's Selection as Wicomico Judge Also Challenged.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Salisbury, Md., Sept. 12.—The circuit court will decide tomorrow upon the constitutionality of the people's court, established in 1927, and the legality of the appointment July 13 of Marion A. Humphreys, Republican political leader, as judge of that tribunal.

Chief Judge Benjamin T. Johnson and Associate Judges James M. Crockett and T. Sangston Insel, on Tuesday, heard six hours of oral argument attacking and defending the act which created peoples court and the appointment of Judge Humphreys. Yesterday opposing counsel filed supporting briefs.

Residence Clause Attacked.

The court was asked to pass upon a petition for a writ of mandamus filed by Lewis C. Merryman, attorney, on behalf of Albert M. Walls as "a citizen and voter of Wicomico County." The petition alleges the act creating the court is unconstitutional in that it provides for the appointment of one justice of the peace for three election districts to be known as the judge of the court and that such justice shall hold office until his successor is appointed and qualified, allegedly contrary to stipulation for a two-year term provided by the constitution.

The legality of Judge Humphreys' appointment is attacked on the grounds that he is not a resident of one of the three election districts in accordance with provisions of the 1927 act.

During the course of argument it was asserted Judge Humphreys resides "within the sound of the voice" from one of the three designated election districts. Defense attorneys also declared if the act is held unconstitutional, all judgments meted out by the present and former judges of peoples court will be invalidated.

Author Defends Act.

Judge Humphreys was represented by former Circuit Court Judge Joseph L. Bailey, Stanley G. Robins and F. Leonard Wailes. By the invitation of the circuit court jurists, F. W. C. Webb and L. Claude Bailey defended the constitutionality of the act.

L. Claude Bailey stated in argument that he was one of the authors of the act and that its provisions are similar to an act creating a people's court in Cumberland. Both measures were passed at the same session of the Maryland General Assembly, he added.

Suffers Loss of Eye.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Mercersburg, Pa., Sept. 12.—Walter Shaw, 30, has been admitted to the Washington County Hospital in Hagerstown, Md., for removal of an eye as a result of an accident Monday. While working on top of a silo at a farm near his home, the end of a wire punctured his eye.

Court Acquires Deed to Airport In Martinsburg

Plans for Improvements Are Rushed to Elkins for Filing.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 12.—In a last-minute deal, the Berkeley County Court took over ownership of Shepherd Flying Field, recently owned by Berkeley Aviation Club, in order to obtain works progress administration funds for improvements. The transfer of the deed was made yesterday afternoon and immediately upon completion of the transaction, the plans for the project were taken by airplane to Elkins, to meet the deadline for the filing.

The deeding of the land to county court climaxed several weeks of wrangling between the club and city council. It was originally planned for the city to take over the field and submit the improvement plans, but because the two groups could not agree over the management, the club turned to county court for help. The court, accordingly, agreed to terms and submitted the improvement of the field as one of its own projects.

Under the agreement between the two bodies the club is to run the field jointly with the county court and will keep up interest payments on the $3,000 indebtedness. Improvements to be made, together with improvements recently completed, will amount to nearly $50,000. When completed the airport will be on the approved list and will be made an official stop by the Central Air Lines.

Sheriff Resents Secret Raid By State on Riviera Truck

Magistrate Sandrock Claims He Called Outside Aid Because of Complaints Filed During Three-Year Operation of Dog Racing.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 12.—Participation of Maj. J. Purdon Wright, superintendent of State police, in a raid on a dog track at Riviera Beach, was a surprise to Magistrate Harrison M. Sandrock, of Round Bay, who tonight said he had arranged the raid.

Sheriff Joseph W. Alton, of Anne Arundel County, today said he had dismissed John E. Park as a deputy sheriff for insubordination in connection with the raid and past cases. Magistrate Sandrock said he "had every reason to believe" that the county commissioners would be requested to appoint Park as a constable.

Maj. Wright led a group of State police and county officers in the raid on the Arundel Kennel Club Saturday night. Sheriff Alton said he was not notified that the raid was to be made and that it was unnecessary to call upon officers outside of the county for the purpose.

"I was very much surprised to learn that this had been pulled off without my knowledge," the sheriff continued.

Magistrate Sandrock said that he called State police headquarters and requested help. He said two men were originally assigned for the purpose.

"I did not know Maj. Wright was to take part until he walked in my office," the magistrate said.

Sandrock declared he had not notified the sheriff. He pointed out that the race track had been operating for three years and the sheriff had "received as many complaints as I had." Sheriff Alton denied having received complaints.

Execution Deferred.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va. Sept. 12.—Jake Johnson, Negro, convicted at Wentworth, N. C., near here, some weeks ago of an attack on an elderly school teacher, will not die at Raleigh tomorrow. He was to have been the first victim to die by lethal gas, but the apparatus is not yet in working order and he has been given a respite.

Frederick Reveals Sewer Plan Data

Citizens Vote Sept. 24 on $553,000 Bonds.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 12.—Complying with a promise to give the citizens all facts on the proposed sewerage system, the mayor and aldermen today made public all information available. Citizens will vote on a $553,000 bond issue September 24.

The officials place the cost at $1,005,000, of which $425,000 will be contributed from PWA funds. The city will issue $553,000 in bonds, bearing 3 per cent interest, and to mature in 40 years.

They place the annual operating cost at $10,000, which will be derived largely from service charges to commercial concerns.

They also estimate that the bonds can be retired by an additional 10 per cent tax levy. The municipal tax rate is now 95 cents per $100. The sewerage lines will extend to all properties within the city limits, they said. The expense of removing and relaying pavements will be paid by the city. It is estimated that 18 months will be required to complete the work and that 547 men will be given employment.

Cut in Food Budget Seen When Oyster Tonging Resumes

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Heathsville, Va., Sept. 12.—The opening of the oyster tonging season in the waters of the Potomac River Monday will be hailed with delight not only by the tongers but by persons in this area who have been affected by the high prices of meats and other foodstuffs. Oysters are scarce in the Potomac, but are found in sufficient quantities to help out the food supply. The season on the Great Wicomico, Rappahannock and other waters opens October 1.

James Dobyns, of Walnut Point, who was formerly an oyster tongmaker at Lewisetta, on Coan River, recalls when he had seen as many as three hundred boats in the harbor on Cocan River at one time, and the oystermen made good wages. Now less than ten boats are engaged in this area and the industry is not profitable even to this number. The natural rocks are practically depleted. Scarcity and low prices have caused the oystermen to seek a living elsewhere. The packers have had several bad seasons.

Oysters are reported fat and of good flavor by the planters of Coan River. Oystermen are hoping the advertising campaign planned by the Tri-State Seafood Association will create greater demand and better prices.

565 Sign Up For Session Of Democrats

Youths of Party to Open Two-Day Program in Richmond Today.

State Senator William Tuck Will Deliver Keynote Address.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Sept. 12.—Twenty-nine young Democratic clubs of Virginia already have registered 565 delegates to the fourth annual State rally to be held here tomorrow and Saturday.

The advance registration was almost double that of the 1934 meeting at Lynchburg, which was attended by 282 delegates.

State Leaders to Attend.

Five Richmond clubs have announced they would send 86 delegates to the conclave, which will attract State leaders of the party.

Advance registration from other clubs is as follows:

Charlottesville and Albemarle County, 8; Campbell County, 14; Wise, 50; Suffolk and Nansemond County, 12; Roanoke City, 11; Portsmouth, 22; Shenandoah, 39; Culpeper, 28; Henrico, 32; York, 4; Madison, 4; Caroline, 20; Chesterfield, 8; Clarke, 26; District of Columbia, 3; Fairfax, 35; Franklin, 10; Lynchburg, 50; Nottoway, 3; Pittsylvania, 12; Roanoke County, 10; Loudoun, 16; Bristol, 2; Appomattox, 11; Bedford, 5; Brunswick, 24, and Danville, 6.

The convention executive committee, of which Harold Snead is chairman and Matt Wiltshire, vice chairman, met this afternoon to review arrangements for the convention.

William Tuck Keynoter.

High lights of the first session will be the keynote address by State Senator William Tuck, who will speak after Mayor J. Fulmer Bright of Richmond and John Galleher, president of Young Democratic Clubs in the State.

A distinguished group of Virginia representatives, State officials and business leaders, together with the young Democratic presidents of six other States, have indicated their intention to attend the banquet at the John Marshall Hotel tomorrow, when Gov. Peery will speak.

Representative C. A. Woodrum, of Roanoke, leader for the New Deal in the Old Dominion, will make the principal address of the Saturday afternoon session at the Mosque here. He will be introduced by Delegate Horace Edwards, of Richmond.

Federalsburg's Mayor Injured On Flood Tour

Chambers and Aid Fall Into Ditch When Earth Moves.

By the Associated Press.

Federalsburg, Md., Sept. 12.—Mayor Thomas H. Chambers suffered bruises about the body and narrowly escaped serious injury today when he fell into a water-filled cavity while inspecting flood damage here.

The mayor and Clifford Crawley were standing near the railroad station looking over damage when the earth gave way, sending them into a water-filled hole. Only a ledge in the hole saved the men from oing into water well over their heads. Crawley escaped injury.

Pennsylvania Railroad officials announced today, as reconstruction work following last week's disastrous flood continued, that train service probably would be restored Sunday or Monday. The railroad was the heaviest individual loser from the flood, its damage amounting to hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Clothing is being distributed now to persons who lost their possessions when flood waters inundated their homes. The Red Cross advisory committee met tonight to consider appeals for aid.

Word was received here today that a WPA project for clearing out the channel of Marshyhope Creek had been approved and sent to Washington.

Many residents here feel that the great volume of flood waters was due in part at least, to drainage work done by CCC men some distance above the town. The new system of drainage ditches is believed to have poured o much alrger volume of overflow water into the creek that has been the case in past years.

State police still are on duty aiding in guarding wrecked homes and stores.

16 Counties Freed From Academy Ban

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 12.—The infantile paralysis quarantine on 16 Virginia counties was lifted toay by Naval Academy authorities.

Virginia was the last State to be freed from the quarantine, with North Carolina being exempted August 26. Modification of the Virginia ban was instituted August 29, with 16 counties still under the restriction. The counties freed from the quarantine today were Alleghany, Amelia, Albemarle, Brunswick, Buckingham, Campbell, Cumberland, Dinwiddie, Fluvanna, Greene, Goochland, Henrico, Louisa, Nelson, Nottaway and Roanoke.

A small group of midshipmen who were unable to visit their homes in the restricted area because of the quarantine left the academy today for the remainder of a leave which culminates September 27, when academic work begins.

Offender Pays Dearly For 'Free' Corn, Peaches

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 12.—The highest price paid in this section this year for corn and peaches is credited to Loring Oates, convicted before Justice W. E. Gordon of stealing corn from Guy Seibert and some peaches from James McDonald.

Oates had been fined $10 and costs on each charge and sent to jail. He paid the fines and costs, close to $30, and the attorney's fee and cost is approximately another $30. So the vegetables and fruit cost $60. The court paroled the offender, suspending the jail term on good behavior for six months.

Gallico ss

Finds Justice Sadly Lacking In Game of Golf.

By Paul Gallico.
A Special Correspondent.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 12.—Flash! The Mumbo Jumbo Co., Inc., in the process of organization by this department, has been abandoned. The business of hexing people is a great fake, something for children and old wives, and I feel that I have been imposed upon. It doesn't work. If it did, Charles Yates and Maurice McCarthy, jr., wouldn't be out of the national amateur golf tournament, which they quite definitely are.

Maurice expired beneath my very eyes just after I had laid a Sicilian curse on his opponent. He looked up on a short chip shot in front of the eighteenth green, after using the wrong club to try to get home, and there is no magic that can overcome that.

There was a sort of "pfiuff" and the ball just trickled onto the green. It is a great disappointment to me, because I was planning to use this strange power in other fields of sport. It might be that golf, being obviously a game inspired by the devil, is immune to attacks from that quarter.

There is little justice in the game. Consider the eighth hole here this morning, with George Voigt, of New York's Tudor City, and Willie Turnesa, of the golfing Turensas, as the contestants and the game close to being even. Voigt hooks a bad drive into the rough. Turnesa hits a long, whistling shot, a brave and daring one, down the side of the alley and has a fine second shot. Voigt plays his second out of the rough and hits it right back into the rough again.

TURNESA plays a truly epic brassie shot and ends up just 8 feet off the edge of the green in 2. Voigt makes a miserable shot out of the rough and has another 80 yards to go to the pin and lies 3 . Turnesa is entitled mentally to concede himself the hole. He has been brave, he has been virtuous, he has been technically perfect.

Voigt now strikes his fourth shot (his opponent still lies 2), and the ball stops exactly 3½ inches from the hole, a par 5. Turnesa chips and is over the hole. He putts and misses and slides 2½ feet past the cup, and behold him, who had the victory a moment before, sweating, jittering, quivering, fighting to halve the hole.

You would enjoy watching Voigt play. The game has made him humble and he marches the greens and fairways with a slight tremor in his soul. He is too old in the sport to have any cockiness or to have any faith in the game as a friend. He has a short putt to go 1-up against Turnesa on the seventeenth green, no more than 18 inches, and the ball looped the loop around the upper inside of the cup before it fell in.

Mr. Voigt, gallery or no gallery, did a little celebratory dance right then and there on the green, a sort of a leggy step with bent knees, something ceremonial, no doubt. Walking down the eighteenth fairway after his drive, and needing a half to win, he said, "This is the shot that counts." Well, well, we'll see how it comes off. His ball lay in a divot hole, but he made no complaint, and his attitude was prayerful rather than assured.

HE hit it to the back edge of the green, halved the hole and won the match, inserting himself into the quarter finals, and sought a couch to contemplate the honor he had won himself, which was to play William Lawson Little this afternoon.

William Lawson Little is the amateur champion of the United

Last 14 Men Are Retired In Order

Pitcher Bears Down in Fifth to Check Only Serious Threat.

Pearson, Stewart Yield 8 Blows; Vosmik and Myer Hitless.

By Shirley Povich.

EARL WHITEHILL pitched pennant-winning baseball for the sixth-place Nats yesterday and they accumulated their third straight victory. Whitehill's pitching wasn't perfect; four men reached base against him, but it was downright good. He throttled the Cleveland Indians with three hits and the Nats' 3-0 triumph is testimony of his handiwork.

The Indians made a hit off Whitehill in the second inning and they made two more in the fifth, but thereafter they swung in vain as the chunky southpaw whipped his fast curve over the corners and retired the last 14 men in order.

While Whitehill was beating back the Injuns, the Nats were pecking away at Monte Pearson and Walter Stewart. They pecked up a run against Pearson in the fourth inning, drove him from the box in the process of scoring another run in the fifth inning, pried a third run out of Walter Stewart in the seventh and had eight hits to show for their efforts.

Vosmik, Myer Hitless.

What had been advertised as a hand-to-hand battle between Joe Vosmik, of the Indians, and Buddy Myer, of the Nats, for the league batting leadership fizzled badly. Both Vosmik and Myer were held hitless in four official trips to the plate, but it required a rare play by Senor Roberto Estallella to keep a hit away from Vosmik in the sixth inning.

A line-drive off Vosmik's bat was headed for left field when Estallella, with springs in his heels, leaped high in the air, knocked the ball down with his glove, scrambled after it with his bow legs, picked it up and rifled a throw to first base that beat the fleet Vosmik by a yard.

In only one inning, the fifth, did the Indians threaten to cheat Whitehill out of his shutout ambitions. That was when Hughes and Phillips singled to left with one out to put Hughes on third. In this emergency, Whitehill retired Phillips on a foul pop to Estallella and struck out Pearson.

Bolton Starts Rally.

The Nats had seven men left on bases before they could crash through with a run in the fourth inning. Pearson issued six passes in those first three innings, but escaped damage. He didn't get by the fourth, though. Cliff Bolton slammed a terrific double over Averill's head, a triple at least for a more ambitious runner, and scored on Kuhel's fly to Vosmik after Whitehill's out had pushed him to third.

Cecil Travis launched the Nats' one-run uprising in the fifth when he singled through the box. Estallella drew his third straight walk to push Travis to second and Powell drove in the run with a sharp single to right. Walter Stewart came into the game at that point to terminate the rally by striking out Kress and Whitehill.

Silverette Triumphs At Detroit by Nose

Detroit, Sept. 12 (AP).—Silverette, in one of the closest finishes of the fall meeting here, beat out Woodlander by a nose in a stretch duel in the feature race at the Detroit track today.

St. Stephens was third, two and one-half lengths back, in the six-furlong race. The race was run in 1:11 4-5 and the winner paid $8.20 for $2.

Pearce Is Named Coach at Central

Bert Coggins Shifted to Woodrow Wilson High.

As forecast last week in The Post, Hardy Pearce, former George Washington football star, was named football coach at Central High School and Coach Irving (Bert) Coggins shifted to Woodrow Wilson High School at Wednesday's meeting of the Board of Education.

Other changes made involving the high school athletic set-up included transfer of Carl Heintell from Tech to Woodrow Wilson High, where he will direct and coach all sports, and appointment of William G. Thompson from Langley Junior High to Tech, where he probably will coach basket ball.

Tigers' Rallies Down Yanks, Boost Lead

Detroit Scores Six Runs in Last Two Innings; Lead 8½ Games.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The Tigers sank their claws into the Yankees today and climbed over them to a still higher place in the American League pennant race as they won the opening game of what may be the deciding series, 8 to 5.

Trailing for seven innings, the Tigers put on one of their characteristic finishes to score 6 runs in the last two frames as home runs and triples bounced off their bats and four pitchers failed to check the assault. The victory gave them an eight and one-half game lead.

A home run by Jack Saltzgaver with two on base in the second inning put the Yanks ahead, and Charley Ruffing pitched as if he intended to hold it, giving only three hits in the first seven frames. Two of those hits produced runs, however, as Ruffing suffered from wildness and Ben Chapman contributed a costly error. The Yanks got one in the fifth on Red Rolfe's single and Chapman's double to lead, 4 to 2, going into the eighth.

Goslin Hits Homer.

A single by Charley Gehringer, a triple by Hank Greenberg and Goose Goslin's home run shattered Ruffing's pitching mastery and put Detroit ahead in one speedy thrust.

The victory not only increased Detroit's margin over the Yanks, but it eliminated the third-place Cleveland Indians, who lost to Washington, from all consideration in the pennant race.

Browns Trounce Red Sox in Opener

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Sept. 12.—The St. Louis Browns, who take keen delight in picking on the Red Sox, opened their series here today with a 6-to-2 victory, thanks to the valiant efforts of "Moose" Solters and Lyn Lary, former Bostonians.

Solters belted Jack Wilson for three hits and drove in two of the visitors' tallies, while Lary kept his former mates at bay by accepting ten chances, several of which seemed destined to go for extra bases. His most brilliant fielding effort came when the Sox had the bases loaded with two out in the ninth. Pinch-Hitter Bing Miller drove viciously to left, only to have Lary nail it with his mitt hand after a long backward run.

Horse Doping Widespread, Is Charge

U.S. to Step In, Should States Refuse to Act, Anslinger Says.

Evidence of Drugging Is Cited as Found All Through Nation.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

THE cruelest racket—doping of race horses to make them win—is as widespread as ever despite the promise of State racing commissioners two years ago to exterminate it, United States Commissioner of Narcotics H. J. Anslinger revealed last night.

"We gave the commissions every opportunity in the world to clean house," he said. "Few of them tried. We can't wait much longer before we have to do their job for them."

Anslinger said that his agents have found evidence of horses being drugged in every State where racing is permitted, and charged:

"Too often horse races are to see who is the best chemist, not which is the best horse. A few racing commissions have tried to correct this evil."

All But One Still Active.

Most serious aspect of the situation, he said, is the fact that every trainer, handler and owner who has been discovered pumping narcotic alkaloids into the veins of a thoroughbred, save one, still is operating on American race tracks.

"The one exception," he said, "is a man now in jail, awaiting depor-

Cubs Trample Dodgers for 8th in Row

Warneke Gives Up 8 Hits to Win His 18th, 13-3; Galan Bat Star.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—The Cubs kept up their brilliant battle to capture the National League pennant today when they slammed the Brooklyn Dodgers into submission, 13 to 3, for their ninth straight victory and their seventeenth in the last 21 starts.

While his mates battered three Brooklyn pitchers for 15 hits, Lon Warneke limited the Dodgers to 8 blows for his eighteenth victory of the season. Augie Galan topped the Chicago clouters with his eleventh home run, a double and a single in five times up.

Suhr played one inning in right field, running his successive games to 615, within three of tying the National League record.

Little, Goodman, Emery, Lynch Gain Semifinals in U. S. Golf

mitted as he walked off the fifteenth green, "the fellow was too much for me."

Voigt, former Walker Cup star, looked upon as the one man who might upset the aspirations of the stolid, broad-shouldered champion, had a close shave in his morning match with Willie Turnesa, squeezing through with a 1-up victory.

Starting off with a birdie 3, Little walked into another, and eventually a 3-up lead on Voigt at the turn, thanks to a 35, 1 under par. No champion played the remaining six holes in 1 over par. Thus, for today's fifth and sixth round matches Little for 30 holes was 1 under par. For his six matches he has been 8 under par.

29 Match Streak for Little.

By entering the semifinals and fulfilling the prediction of veteran observers, Little stretched his winning streak in the two British and two American championships to 29, a record that not even the great Jones in the heyday of his power and glory could equal.

If Goodman cannot hurdle the Little obstacle tomorrow, there is at least one golfer still in the battle with a good chance to do it. He is Walter Emery, who is playing the greatest golf of his career, pitching and putting his opponents to death and driving the old apple a mile.

Emery, wiry and strong, who struts around the course with a gray sweatshirt and brown sport hat, has literally burned up this course. With a running fire of pars and birdies he has shelled out par for a 13-stroke loss for his six matches. To become 13 under par is playing some kind of golf, and Walter Emery, of Oklahoma, has made par look ridiculous and fragile.

This is Emery's first fling in the National Amateur, and his greatest claim to fame since his 1933 Intercollegiate Championship. He didn't get by the first round of the Intercollegiates in Washington this year because of a bad streak of putting, but he's on good terms with that putting blade, and it's responding beautifully to its master's commands.

With the greatest of ease, Emery trimmed Held, veteran New Yorker, going out in 32, with 4 birdies, to stand 7 up on the chap who yesterday blasted the hopes of Washington's Roger Peacock in the fourth round.

Tilt Ends on Fifteenth.

Emery started back 5 to 4, 2 over, and lost two holes to Held when the former National Public Links champion birdied the thirteenth and fourteenth, but Walter ended the scrap on the fifteenth with a grand par 4. The Oklahoman was 2 under par for the 15 holes, and Held was 3 over par.

Emery's nightcap opponent, Munger, sophomore at Duke University, had eliminated Harry Givan, of Seattle, on the nineteenth hole in a thrill-soaked morning match. Munger sank a 20-footer on the first extra hole to climax the battle.

But Munger, ordinarily a good match player even in fast company, semifinalist in the 1933 Amateur, couldn't cope with the Oklahoma University sensation after they hit the turn. Emery sank a 10-footer for a deuce on the ninth to go 1 up; birdied on the tenth by canning another 10-footer, and birdied the twelfth. Two under par against Munger, was the Oklahoman.

Lynch, greatest golfer Georgetown has turned out since the days of Maurice McCarthy, scored richly earned victories. Studying every shot carefully, making few mistakes, driving the ball for alarming distances, and banging away at the emerald target with the accuracy of a marksman, Lynch played today's two matches in exactly even par.

His golf was not flashy, but steady, and showed Lynch to be the golfer all Boston said he would be after he quit the caddy ranks nine years ago.

Born and reared within a drive and a spoon shot of the Country Club of Brookline, a few years before Francis Ouimet stepped out one rainy afternoon to defeat Vardon and Ray for the open championship, Lynch finds himself just two matches removed from the championship he has decided on winning.

He may do it, this Lynch, if he par charge, and then match Little, provided he meets him, hole for hole on the back nine, where the champion usually cuts loose.

The former Georgetown captain was 1 over par against Transue, after going out in one even par 36 to stand 1 up. He finished strong, winning the eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth and fifteen. Lynch splitting the pin all the way, was 3 under par for the first four holes, starting 4-4-4-3. He had three birdies in a row.

The curley-haired Boston boy, playing in his second National Amateur, snared four birdies in his match with the elongated Fred Haas.

Lynch birdied the second to go 1 up. He made a miraculous recovery from the woods to sink a curling 30-footer on the eighth for a birdie 4½. He nailed an 8-footer for a deuce on the ninth for a win and thus went to the tenth, 2 up on the Dixie lad. He had blasted out a 34 to Haas' 36. Haas won the thirteenth with a par 4 when Lynch was short with his second, and the Bostonian won back a hole at the fourteenth with a par 3 to a 4.

Two up and four to go, Lynch dropped the sixteenth to Haas' birdie 4, and in dramatic fashion ended the battle on the seventeenth by firing an iron to within 8 feet of the pin and sinking his putt for a birdie 3.

Goodman's rout of Kocsis, the blonde Michigan State champion, was indeed a surprise, especially since Kocsis in the morning had crushed Tommy Goodwin, New Yorker, 7 and 6.

The short, auburn-haired Goodman had little mercy on Kocsis. He scored a 34 on the first nine with seven pars and two birdies to become 4 up and shot the next four holes in one under par. At the end of 13 Nebraska Johnny had licked par by three strokes.

Kocsis' rout began at the fourth, where he missed a short putt and Goodman got his par. Goodman's play was the answer to a golfer's prayer, as he was not over on a single hole, having 10 pars and three birdies.

This Goodman was 2 over against Cleveland's Meister, who never had a chance after they passed the turn, Goodman winning the last four holes.

Little Sinks 15-foot Putt.

Little ended his match with McCullough in the characteristic fashion. He rolled in a 15-footer for a birdie 3 after McCullough, twice in the rough, sank one clear across the green to preserve his par.

The champion won the eighth and ninth to square the match, and won the next three holes, sinking a 40-footer for a birdie 4 on the twelfth—usually his lucky hole.

Voigt disregarded the fact that Little won the first hole of their match with a birdie. The former Walker Cup ace squared matters by winning the fourth when Little three-putted. Little really was embarrassed on this fourth, for he missed a tiny two-footer. Voigt, however, looked jittery on a 2-foot putt on the next hole and missed it can stop Emery's sensational sub-to permit Little to win the hole and go 1 up again.

Goes 4 Up at Tenth.

You couldn't hold Little from then on, as the champion took the sixth, won the seventh despite a muffed 3-footer that would have given him a birdie, the eighth with a birdie 4, and went over to the other side with a 3-up advantage.

Little took the tenth to become 4 up, as Voigt dumped his second into a creek and took a 6. The champion canned a 10-footer for a deuce and won on the eleventh, and lost the fourteenth to Voigt's deuce.

The finish was like this:

It was the fifteenth hole. Voigt was on the green in 2. Little sliced into the rough, lie not so good. He waded into a stiff iron and it dropped short of the pin.

Little approached weakly, 10 feet from the pin and Voigt putted up to within 5 feet.

Plop, into the cup went Little's putt for his par, and Voigt, the gamest golfer that ever lived, rushed over and congratulated the champion.

So you can see for yourself that each time Little needed a putt to end the match, he sank it.

Chancery, Choice at $3.50, Wins Narragansett Feature Easily

Time Flight Drops Back, Second

Winner in Money Eight Times in Row; Near Track Record.

By the Associated Press.

NARRAGANSETT PARK, R. I., Sept. 12.—Marty Madden's consistent gelding, Chancery, won the Barrington Purse, a mile for 3-year-olds today in close to record time. Carrying 115 pounds, the heaviest burden he has borne all year, Chancery ran the mile in 1:37 4-5, only four-fifths off the track record, to win by 2½ lengths from Percy Pike's Time Flight. This gave Chancery a record of three victories in his last four starts. He has been in the money in eight consecutive starts.

Time Flight took the lead as they flashed past the clubhouse and when Jimmy Stout found no chance to move up on the rail as they went around the first turn, he kept Chancery just off the pace.

Tries to Move Up.

At the three-eighths pole Chancery tried to move up on the outside of Time Flight, but Charley Stevenson answered the challenge with Pike's gelding. The pace dropped a little when Stout found he could not overtake Time Flight at that point. At the eighth pole he tried again and there was no denying Chancery this time. He sailed by Time Flight and won easily.

The Calumet Farm's Skip It, a colt which has run with such company as Discovery and Omaha, closed fast at the end to finish in third postion.

Chancery, an odds-on choice, paid $3.50, $2.50 and $2.30.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CREME DE MENTHE, $5.80, $3.60, $2.60; SPITTENIMAGE, $3.90, $2.80; DIXIE FOX, $2.80.

CREME DE MENTHE went into command in the first few strides. Was rated along under steadying restraint, and drew out in the closing furlong. SPITTENIMAGE, in closest pursuit of the leader from the start, made several bids to catch the leader, but was not good enough. DIXIE FOX moved up fast on the outside in the first three-sixteenths and continued gamely to the end. OMUS, slightly restrained early, was unable to reach the leaders in the last quarter-mile. PAUL JUNIOR, forwardly placed early, weakened.

SECOND RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-old maidens. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:11. Off at 3:13. Winner, Mrs. A. R. Smith's b. c. (3), by Challenger II—Florence Kranis. Trained by O. L. Foster. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $70; fourth, $30. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:07 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—THE REW, $17.20, $8.50, $5.40; BERNARDINE W., $14.70, $8.30; FALLS CITY, $11.60.

THE REW promptly placed all the way, moved up stoutly when called upon, assumed a slight lead before reaching the stretch and, hard ridden, drew clear at the end. BERNARDINE W. showed good early speed, dropped back, but came gamely on the outside through the stretch. FALLS CITY moved up on the outside and, clear of Whitley in the drive, HERONDAS, on the outside, was unable to reach the leaders. SUN CRUMP displayed good early speed.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won ridden out; place, same. Went to post at 3:42. Off at 3:47. Winner, Mrs. M. Colford's ch. g. (4), by Dominant—Easy Way. Trained by M. Colford. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $70; fourth, $30. Time, 0:23, 0:45 3-5, 1:12 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHIMNEY TOP, $9.20, $4.80, $3.60; METAURUS, $5.40, $4.20; REGULA BADDUN $6.10.

CHIMNEY TOP showed speed from the start, withstood determined opposition from STRENUOUS, disposed of the latter after going a half-mile and held METAURUS safe at the finish. METAURUS, restrained within striking distance of the pacemaker, came to the outside when reaching the stretch and closed stoutly. REGULA BADDUN displayed good speed all the way and held on gamely to the end. FRED ALLEN made up ground on the outside in the last three-sixteenths. STRENUOUS displayed good early speed.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:16. Off at 4:18. Winner, J. R. IMA COUNT	111	7	2	3hd	5½½	8½	9	Stevenson	16.40

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BARCAROLLE, $15.70, $6.90, $4.70; STAINFORTH, $9.00, $5.00; SOME GOOD, $2.80.

BARCAROLLE, avoiding the fast early pace, moved up on the inside swinging out of the back stretch, saved considerable ground when the leaders went wide at the stretch turn and, closing stoutly, outlasted STAINFORTH at the end. STAINFORTH showed speed all the way and fought it out in game fashion. SOME GOOD, quickest to begin, was in close quarters nearing the far turn, fought his way clear, but weakened in the stretch. SPEEDMORE closed with good energy. CHARACTER moved up on the outside and went well.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,200. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:46. Off at 4:47. Winner, M. Madden's ch. g. (3), by Chance Play—Courtly. Trained by O. H. Miller. Value to winner, $900; second, $180; third, $85; fourth, $35. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:48 3-5, 1:11 4-5, 1:37 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHANCERY, $3.50, $2.50, $2.30; TIME FLIGHT, $3.10, $2.70; SKIP IT, $3.40.

CHANCERY followed in closest pursuit of TIME FLIGHT while the latter was establishing the pace, wore the pacemaker down when reaching the stretch and drew out steadily through the closing furlong. TIME FLIGHT showed keen speed in pacemaking but was no match for the winner when challenged. SKIP IT dropped back in the opening strides and followed far back for the first half-mile, but came gamely through the closing quarter-mile. STAVKA ran well placed. CHEWAWA went evenly.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:17. Off at 5:17½. Winner, F. S. P. Randolph's b. g. (3), by Sun Prince—Dutchess Kathleen. Trained by J. Petz. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $70; fourth, $30. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:12 2-5, 1:39 4-5, 1:44 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FREE, $12.40, $5.70, $3.40; HIGH FINANCE, $10.20, $5.50; BRASS MONKEY, $4.50.

FREE, restrained in pursuit of the pace until reaching the far turn, moved up on the outside, cut out courageously with HIGH FINANCE through the stretch and outlasted him at the end. HIGH FINANCE went wide in the run to the first turn, was rated along under steadying restraint and held on determinedly in the closing drive. BRASS MONKEY, a trailer early, closed a big gap. CORNER BOY in spite repeated trouble early, was unable to reach the leaders. BIG GAWK tired.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:46. Off at 5:47. Winner, H. Knight's b. m. (6), by Supremus—Selective. Trained by G. C. Milton. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $70; fourth, $30. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:13 3-5, 1:39 4-5, 1:46 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PREFER, $20.20, $12.10, $6.10; HIDDEN LORE, $7.80, $4.50; WINGED FLIGHT, $3.30.

PREFER, away last for field to the first turn, was rated along in front after opening up a good lead and, though tiring in the last furlong, held HIDDEN LORE safe. The latter moved up early in the last three furlongs and closed stoutly in the stretch run. WINGED FLIGHT worked his way up gradually and came on gamely in the final drive. PLATINUM BLONDE, outrun for the first six furlongs, came with a belated rush in the stretch.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 6:16. Off at 6:18. Winner, W. E. Ames' sr. h. (5), by Stefan the Great—Asperities II. Trained by A. Tumin. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $70; fourth, $30. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 4-5, 1:13, 1:40 2-5, 1:47 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GUARDIAN, $5.40, $4.20, $3.20; MORESORIS, $16.00, $8.40; GUIDING LIGHT, $4.70.

GUARDIAN went to the front in the run to the first turn, withstood determined opposition from GUIDING LIGHT, disposed of him and held away to the end. MORESORIS, never far from the lead, moved up stoutly when called upon and held on stoutly in the closing drive. GUIDING LIGHT, in nearest pursuit of the leader for most of the way, weakened in the last quarter-mile. SUN ENVOY closed some ground. WAR TIDE, well placed, was unable to improve his position.

Morgans Sued For $500,000 On Investment

Brookline Man Charges Negligence in Transaction.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Sept. 12.—A suit for $500,000 against J. P. Morgan and 19 associates was filed in the United States court today by William T. Snow, of Brookline, Mass., as executor of the estate of his father, Frederic E. Snow. The suit alleges gross negligence in an investment transaction in December, 1930.

Papers giving notice of the suit were served on Mr. Morgan and his son, Henry S. Morgan, several months ago when they attended the launching of a new United States cruiser in Quincy, Mass.

Mr. Snow alleged that his father invested $250,000 on the strength of a statement issued by the J. P. Morgan associates.

The declaration charged gross negligence in a banking transaction in 1930 in the reorganization of the Massachusetts Bankers of Boston and New York, a private banking corporation.

The declaration further stated that an attempt was made late in 1930 to save the Massachusetts Bankers from going under because it found itself in financial difficulties and an appeal was sent to the Morgan firm for assistance.

A plan was evolved, the declaration set forth, in which the Morgan firm and others were to invest $10,000,000 and a Boston group was to raise $5,000,000, making a total of $15,000,000.

Mr. Snow alleged that, relying on statements by the Morgan firm, his father drew his check for $250,000 and advanced it to the Boston group. The papers charged that the Morgan statements were untrue and not made with reasonable prudence.

Frederic E. Snow, whose son brought the suit as executor of his father's estate, was a prominent Boston lawyer.

The defendants named in the suit were Mr. Morgan, Thomas W. Lamont, Junius S. Morgan, George Whitney, Thomas S. Lamont, S. Parker Gilbert, Charles Steele, Thomas Cochran, Russell C. Leffingwell, Frances D. Barton, Arthur M. Anderson, William Ewing, Harold Stanley, Henry S. Morgan, Henry P. Davison and Edward Hopkinson, jr., all of New York, and Edward T. Stotesbury, Horatio G. Lloyd, Thomas Newhall and Charles D. Dickey, all of Philadelphia.

Eastern Selling Depresses Wheat

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 12.—Persistent selling on the part of Eastern houses, together with pressure believed to be Canadian hedging, led to late downturns of Chicago wheat values today.

Advances that took place earlier in the week market here were more than overcome, despite strength shown by Liverpool quotations and notwithstanding Buenos Aires prices had reached a new top for this year. Export sales of Canadian wheat the past two days were estimated at 4,000,000 bushels.

Wheat in Chicago closed weak, ⅝@⅞ under yesterday's finish, December 92¾@92½, corn ¼@1¼ down, December 56½@56¾, oats ⅛@¼ off, and provisions varying from 25 cents decline to 12 cents gain.

Virginia Expects Good Wheat Prices

Richmond, Va., Sept 12 (AP).—Good prices for wheat during the 1935-1936 season, due to decline in both the United States and world wheat supplies, were predicted today by Henry M. Taylor, Federal-State agricultural statistician. He said Virginia county agents would hold meetings next week throughout the State on the 1936-1939 AAA wheat program.

About 7,600 Virginia farmers signed AAA production control contracts last year, Mr. Taylor said. There are 70,000 farms in Virginia which grow wheat, but on many of them the entire crop is consumed at home.

Food Index Reaches Highest in 5 Years

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—The Dun & Bradstreet weekly food index advanced 5 cents over last week to stand at $2.77 for the period ended September 10. This brought the current level to the highest level in five years, or since September 11, 1930, when the index was $2.79. The rise followed a small decline last week and the week before.

Bank Clearings Continue Rise At Slower Pace

Total for 22 Leading Cities Is 7.3% Above a Year Ago.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 12.—Bank clearings continued to rise last week, but the rate of gain was less pronounced than in recent periods, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

The total for the 22 leading cities was $4,686,763,000 against $4,367,125,000 a year ago, an increase of 7.3 per cent. For the preceding week the advance was 21.2 per cent.

At New York City clearings were $2,979,256,000, an increase of 4.5 per cent over the amount reported last year, while the aggregate for outside centers was $1,707,507,000, a gain of 12.7 per cent.

The improvement continued at most of the outside centers, particularly Western and Pacific Coast points.

The total for the week was in excess of that for the short week preceding by $425,737,000.

Chicago clearings were $251,800,000 against $232,900,000 a year ago.

Market Moves Of the Day Seen In Brief Review

What the Stock Market Did.

	Thur.	Wed.
Advances	191	369
Declines	453	286
Unchanged	179	204
Total issues	823	859

Stocks—The headlong forward rush of the previous session was arrested and all but turned back. Principal setbacks were suffered by the issues foremost in recent gaining. There were few outstanding weak spots. A number of specialties and metals pointed higher at the close. Transfers off to 1,893,770.

Bonds—Weakness in the Federal list and unsteadiness in parts of the corporate list gave the market a mottled appearance. Rails were helped by a good statement from the Southern. A mixed tone ruled in the foreign section with changes very narrow. Transactions increased to 13,992,000.

Curb — Despite heavy profit-taking, price changes were narrow and metal shares were firm. The turnover was 300,000 shares against 334,000 shares on Wednesday.

Grains — Selling by Eastern houses and Canadian hedging dropped wheat prices ⅜ to ⅞. Corn futures also were down ¼ to 1¾ and oats were ⅛ to ¼ lower.

Cotton — The market worked slightly lower with reports of favorable growing weather. Closings were 6 to 7 points lower with October final at 10.43.

Sugar — Raw sugar steady at 3.50 with little interest. Refined unchanged at 5.10 for the fine granulated.

Coffee—Spot coffee was steady at 8½ to 8⅝ for Santos No. 4, while the Rio No. 7 also remained unchanged at 7½.

Bar silver—Unchanged at 65⅜ cents per ounce in New York. In London last prices were up 1-16d to 29⅜d (65.53 cents).

Bar gold—Up 1½d to 140s 11d in London ($34.80).

Pacific Gas Files $20,000,000 Issue

The Securities and Exchange Commission announced yesterday that Pacific Gas & Electric Co., of San Francisco, had filed a registration statement for $20,000,000 first and refunding mortgage bonds, series G, 4 per cent, due December 1, 1964.

The proceeds will be used to refund a 5 per cent issue outstanding. The underwriting group is headed by Lazard Feres & Co., Inc.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stocks Decline Abruptly in Last Hour but Recover Partly Toward Close—Wheat and Cotton Slightly Lower—Foreign Exchange Steady.

New York, Sept. 12.—The long upward movement in stocks came to a halt today, leaving the market community to doubt whether this was the beginning of a swing in the opposite direction or just an incident in a rising market. Losses of 1 to 2 points were recorded in the late trading, but just before the close a partial rally was observed. Volume of transactions fell short of 2,000,000 shares.

Although the decline did not get well under way until the last hour, it was apparent that the market was meeting resistance throughout the session. An increasing number of brokerage houses had been converted to the belief that a setback was due, and apparently they were having an influence on their customers.

Before the decline started silver stocks were one or two points higher, in contrast with their recent heaviness. Coppers were firm, and railroad equipment issues, led by Baldwin, were irregularly higher. The same was true of Chemical, tobacco and utility stocks. Allied Chemcal reached into new high ground.

Final Selling Flurry.

Fractionally lower prices were recorded for mail order, department store, rubber, food oil and steel stocks, but these losses were magnified in the last hour of selling.

As might have been expected, when the selling gathered momentum it affected most those stocks that had profited largely by the long advance. Thus, Westinghouse and Chrysler developed more than average weakness.

In the bond market, meanwhile, the demand for speculative issues faded away and numerous losses of a point or more were recorded in the old favorites, including Interborough notes. Treasury obligations were slightly lower.

Although the quotation for time money remained unchanged at one-quarter of 1 per cent, the larger local banks were found to have withdrawn from the market and apparently they intend to stay out until a rate of one-half of 1 per cent can be obtained. This stand is taken by way of attempting to establish a more proper relation between call and time money rates.

Foreign exchange continued dull and rate changes were unimportant. Cotton was a shade lower. Wheat was only fractionally under yesterday's closing but real weakness developed in corn.

Treasury Operations.

The Treasury seems to be encountering no difficulties in diluting the supply of circulating money with silver certificates. The latest Treasury daily statement discloses that $859,965,152 are now in circulation, an increase of about $50,000,000 since July 1. Probably about $125,000,000 are in the Federal Reserve banks, leaving some $725,000,000 in actual circulation. A year ago circulation of silver certificates outside of the reserve banks was only $437,000,000. In the general fund of the Treasury is $153,000,000 waiting to be pledged against more silver certificate issues on a basis of about 50 cents in silver for every $1 in certificates, adding to the Government's seigniorage "profits" which already have exceeded $153,000,000 since the silver currency program began.

Van Sweringens.

The apparent willingness of the bankers holding notes of Van Sweringen companies to take a loss instead of becoming permanent investors in railroad holding companies will have the surprising result of returning control of the properties to the Van Sweringens—unless some Napoleon with more cash outbids them. The vitality of their system is embarrassing to critics of the methods used to build it.

General Motors.

Speculators apparently were most impressed by the conservative passages in the statement of Alfred P. Stone explaining the General Motors dividend policy. The stock opened three-eights of a point lower while stockholders were opening their letters with the increased dividend checks for 50 cents regular and 25 cents extra.

Publicity.

Announcement of a stock exchange inquiry in Interborough Rapid Transit trading was a commendable break with exchange tradition, which forbids any statement except when a questionnaire is mailed to all members. The principal argument of the exchange for secret sleuthing is that announcement of an investigation adversely affects a security, although nothing irregular may be uncovered subsequently. In this case, apparently, it was felt that any damage to the prices had been completed by City Chamberlain Berle's threat to ask the SEC to run down the circulators of false rumors and the manipulators of prices.

FDIC Faces Court Test on Assessments

Manufacturers Trust Co. Stockholder Sues in New York.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Washington banking quarters expressed great interest yesterday in the move launched by a stockholder of a New York bank to test the constitutionality of the Federal deposit insurance law.

A stockholder of the Manufacturers Trust Co. brought action in the New York City Federal Court to prevent the bank from paying its assessment to the deposit corporation and requested that the court declare title 1 of the banking act of 1935 unconstitutional.

Despite avowals to the contrary many bankers have for some time harbored doubts as the constitutionality of the assessment feature of the insurance law. Banks have declined, however, to start the actual court tests.

While the banking act was still pending before Congress numerous bankers waged a strenuous battle to modify the deposit insurance provisions and succeeded in reducing the required assessment from ⅛ of 1 per cent of the bank's total deposits to 1-12 of 1 per cent.

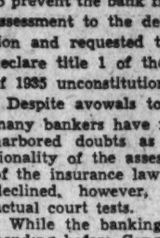
Many of the large banks have attacked the method of levying assessments as unfair because each account is covered only up to $5,000, while the assessment is based on the entire deposits. In a number of the leading institutions the percentage of uninsured funds is quite large while in a great many of the smaller ones virtually all the money is insured.

The present suit charges that the act is in violation of the United States Constitution in that it "takes property of the bank and its stockholders without due process of law in order to set up a guarantee fund for the protection of a certain limited class of depositors in all banks throughout the United States."

Local bankers pointed out that even if the injunction is granted it will not in any way affect the operation of the F. D. I. C. fund, pending the decision of the higher court. Until the case is settled the Manufacturers Trust has declared itself willing to observe all details of the law.

A. I. B. Dinner.

The fall campaign for enrollment in the Washington Chapter of the American Institute of Banking was formally opened last night at the annual educational dinner held in the Raleigh Hotel.



STONIER.

Harold M. Stonier, national educational director of the A. I. B., in delivering the principal address stressed the advantages offered young bankers by systematic training in the technicalities of banking.

He expressed the view that in the next few years banks will greatly expand their present scope. As a result of the enlargement, opportunities for the bankers prepared in new fields will be vastly increased, he declared.

About 30 officers of the local chapter attended the dinner. Edward M. Blalklock, of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., chairman of the educational committee, presided and briefly outlined the educational program for the coming year.

Charles H. Doing, president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, partial sponsor of the institute, extended greetings of the association. Other speakers were Bruce B. Frantz and Paul J. Seltzer, of the American Security & Trust; Robert H. Sisson, of the Hamilton National, and J. Earl McGeary, of W. B. Hibbs & Co., president of the chapter.

Bank Graduates.

Graduates of the Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, received their certificates while special prize winners were awarded trophies and scholarships at the annual commencement exercises.

Following is the list of prize winners and recipients of certificates:

Prize winners in the pre-standard courses were: First, W. Richard Light, Washington Loan & Trust; second, A. Stanley Wolfe, Riggs National Bank, and third, Gustav E. Rott, American Security & Trust Co.

Winners in the standard courses were: First, G. Norman Cobb, Vienna Trust Co., Vienna, Va.; second, Eugene F. Case, Riggs National, and third, George H. Myers, Riggs National.

The prize to the woman student attaining the highest general average was won by Miss Louise Sweeney, Hamilton National Bank, this honor being announced by Miss Alice M. Hilton, president of the Bank Women's Club.

Aubrey O. Dooley, Hamilton National, was announced as winner of the W. W. Spalding Trophy. Runners-up were Robert H. Lacey, Columbia National; Lundeen V. Steele, Washington Loan & Trust; N. P. Morse, American Security & Trust, and Miss Edith R. Hunter, Credit Administration, these awards being presented by Robert A. Sisson, committee chairman.

Pre-standard certificates were presented to the following students: James B. Ahalt, City Bank; Albert J. Benjamin, Security Savings & Commercial Bank; Virginia Birsfield, Union Trust Co.; George D. Boughton, Union Trust Co.; John L. Bryant, American Security & Trust Co.; Harry Chenoweth, Second National; Paul W. Clarke, Hamilton National; Betty Coe, American Security & Trust Co.; George E. Rott, American Security & Trust; Rose Totten, Washington Loan & Trust; David W. Ward, Lincoln National; A. Stanley Wolfe, Riggs National, and Martha D. Yates, National Metropolitan.

Standard certificates were awarded to Smith Blair, jr., Washington Loan & Trust; Eugene F. Case, Riggs National; G. Norman Cobb, Vienna Trust; Brice Duvall Duckett, Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co.; John Mathews Harris, Anacostia Bank; C. William McCormick, Treasury Department; George H. Myers, Riggs National; T. Grant Ridgely, City Bank, and Mary Louise Sweeney, Hamilton National.

First Brewery Stock Listed on Big Board

New York, Sept. 12.—The first application of a brewery for listing its securities on the New York Stock Exchange was approved last night when the 3390,412 shares of no-par stock of the Pfeiffer Brewing Co. were admitted to trading privileges. Although the stock list committee has been sounded out by other brewing concerns, the negotiations never led to formal applications.

Retail Sales Here Are Over Average of U. S.

Federal Reserve Bank Reports Local Gain of 17.5%.

Retail sales in Washington department stores during August led the entire Fifth Federal Reserve District in the amount of gain over the same month of 1934, the Reserve Bank in Richmond announced yesterday.

While dollar volume of sales in the five States included in the Reserve survey rose but 7 per cent, local stores rolled up a total gain of 17.5 per cent. The States of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North and South Carolina are included in the Federal district.

Washington also led in the cumulative sale gain, advancing 14.2 per cent over last year, while the Fifth District as a whole averaged but 6 per cent increased sales.

For the entire United States, retail sales in August were but 4 per cent higher than last year. The gain during the first eight months of the year was also set at 4 per cent.

Percentage comparisons of sales in fifth district cities in August and the eight months, with the same periods last year, follow:

Cotton Is Lower On Good Weather

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 12. — Cotton worked slightly lower today under moderate selling based on reports of improving weather conditions in the South. The market closed steady at net declines of 6 to 7 points. Southern selling and scattering liquidation were absorbed by trade and foreign buying.

Grant Co. Sales Higher.

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—Sales of the W. T. Grant Co. for August amounted to $6,732,321, against $6,292,108 in August, 1934, an increase of 6.9 per cent.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

The pound sterling and the gold bloc currencies ruled a little lower in terms of the dollar yesterday.

In New York the pound eased ¼ of a cent to $4.93¾, following transactions in London which found the dollar slightly higher at the equivalent of 4.9311 to the pound.

In New York the French franc was off .00⅛ of a cent at 6.59¼ cents. In earlier dealings in Paris the dollar was steady at 6.580 cents to the franc.

The Swiss franc and the guilder were both down .01 of a cent in New York at 32.83 and 67.96 cents, respectively. The belga was unchanged at 16.97 cents.

Nation Gives Up 1-3 of Income to Government

Cost Ratio Unreasonable, Says Head of Big Drug Firm.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bridgeport, Conn., Sept. 12.—Mounting cost of government, not chargeable to any single political party, is the basic cause of increasing living cost and the continuance of widespread public uneasiness and fear, said F. Donald Coster, here today. Mr. Coster is president of McKesson & Robbins, Inc., the 102-year-old pharmaceutical manufacturers.

"Business men realize that the ratio between national income and cost of government is out of all reasonable proportion," he said. "At present this ratio is approximately 1-3, which means that $1 out of every $3 of national income pays for government. This stupendous sum, which must be raised through taxation, for this year alone is $17,000,000,000. Our total income is approximately $50,000,000,000.

"Excessive spending is not limited to the Federal Government alone," Mr. Coster continued, "although the current annual figure of $4,500,000,000 is staggering. Added to this is $9,000,000,000 for State governments and $3,500,000,000 for local governments. While emergency legislation has, of course, added greatly to the tax burden, the immediate situation cannot be held entirely responsible for the national condition. For during the past ten years more money has been spent for all purposes of government than during the entire previous history of our Nation.

"There are said to be in the United States today some 175,000 separate and distinct governing units and each has certain spending powers. Informed and qualified observers have suggested that this number could be cut to 10,000 without serious loss of efficiency.

"Isn't this possibility worth exploring? Many of these present bodies not only have the power of formulating regulations for spending, but also power to direct such spending. Except for top bonding limits, many such expenditures are now utterly uncontrollable. Can't we get along with fewer governments? Can't we consolidate functions effectively and simplify others. And by so doing, can't lower cost to the taxpayer result?

"Competent research and analysis have paved the way for correcting countless difficult problems of commerce and industry. New and better methods have been found, new roads to success opened. For example, the fields of medicine and pharmaceuticals with which we are in constant contact furnish cases in point. Well organized research and interested application of research findings have enabled more progress to be made in these professions during the past 50 years than in the ages preceding."

Ritchie Reiterates 'Hopes' for Party

Pleads for 'Fundamental' Ideals on Return Home.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 12.—Albert C. Ritchie, former Governor of Maryland, returned to Baltimore today from a trip to England, reiterating his "hope" that the "Democratic Party will return to the practice of fundamental Democratic principles."

Asked for his ideas concerning a third party movement in next year's national political picture, Ritchie said:

"I've been away for some little time and, of course, am not in close touch with developments here. I have never subscribed to the idea of a third party, but still, I'm hoping that the Democratic Party will return to the practice of fundamental principles."

Asks $16,000 of WPA.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 12.—The Mayor and Council of Mount Airy have made application to the Federal Government for approximately $16,000 with which to make street improvements. The application has been forwarded to Francis H. Dryden, WPA administrator, in Baltimore, who has it under consideration.

Field Is Reappointed Manager of Winchester

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Sept. 12.—Arthur M. Field has been unanimously selected as city manager, it was announced today after a session of common council in which other city employes were continued in office.

There was no opposition for city manager or city solicitor, filled by James P. Reardon for many years. Competition was keen for places on the police force with 36 applicants. The present force was re-elected with C. W. Hollis as chief.

134 Strikers Get Benefits.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lynchburg, Va., Sept. 12.—Benefits have been paid to 134 members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, who struck at the S. & K. Knee Pants plant here two weeks ago. Amount of benefits paid was not made public. A settlement of the strike was brought about by city officials.
